COMING OF PROHIBITION FAILS TO WORRY NOBLE RED MAN

Indian, Like White Friend, Turns Resourcefully to Drugs and Making of Own Stills.

BY JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

THE great American Indian is not, like some folks, lightly to be thrust from his purpose by such trifles as penal statutes. When the west went dry, as far as the noble red man didn't worry. He had to have booze or he didn't feel like fighting, and if he a bright world died for him.

So he got the booze. He got it at

When I want brandy I put in peaches and grapes, light the lamp, say presto a couple of times and when I turn the tap, out flows the drink. For whisky I put in grain—oats for Scotch, rye for rye, corn for bourbon, etc., and she costs me just about a cent a drink, whereas, under the good old wet days they used to nick me for 20 to 70 cents for the same quantity of inferior poison. Oh! I guess I don't know anything, I don't. I'm foolish, I am."

Prove Their Superior Beauty and Value in Comparison With Diamonds Purchased From Eastern Jewelry Houses.

THERE have been a number of instances where local people have purchased diamonds in the east and other distant points to their disadvantage.

We have had occasion to come contact with some of these purchasers, and have, through comparison of their selections with our own diamonds, proven that they could have purchased to greater advan-tage here.

THE BIG MAN, the man with selling talent, the man who looks the part - the 100 per cent man, chooses his printer on the same basis that he chooses a salesman. Printing, as well as the spoken sales-talk, must measure up to certain ideals, be backed by appearance and individuality in order to impress and compel favorable attention-create that prestige which sells the goods-be it a product, an idea or service.

That KILHAM QUALITY PRINTING embodies all this is demonstrable to the broadgauged man. When he inspects our printing, engraving, steel die embossing and filing supplies manufacturing plant, located on fourth and fifth floors of this building, and sees the ideas typed with full knowledge of the salesproducing effects desired, he understands.
