RANGE TROUBLE SHIFTED

Klickitat County Cattle Difficulty Results in Arrests.

WHITE SALMON, Wash., July 26.—(Special)—The cattle range trouble of the Klickitat county cattle range trouble seems to have shifted to the back side of the county, in the Glenwood district.

The Perry-Barker combination has been endeavoring to round up its stock, which is claimed to be driven off the range by their opponents, and have failed to find quite a number. It is reported that a number of residents, several men of family, have been arrested by the county officers.

In a former mention of this trouble it was reported that Wyrles and Wyler had been warned to leave the country. This should have read Perry and Barker.

River grades, an abundance of road material along the route, probable shorter distances, more, more, more, served and cutting out of two or four bad hills are urged as reasons for the change. The committee to work with other organizations to secure the construction of the permanent highway.

MONUMENT AT OREGON CITY WILL BE DEDICATED TO OREGON'S PIONEER PAPER

History of "Spectator" in Days When News Traveled by Steamer or Overland Caravan Will Be Recalled by Visit of National Editorial Association to West.

In the days when news came only when steamers or overland caravans reached the coast, when it was months before important events occurring in the east became known to the west, a group of men interested in the future of Oregon City, then the seat of government for the provisional government of Oregon, determined that a press would greatly promote their interests.

The germ of thought was born in 1841 and on February 5, 1846, the Oregon Spectator was first published to the public. In so doing it gained the lasting prestige of being the first newspaper published west of the Rocky mountains.

Early next month when the delegates of the National Editorial Association visit Portland they will be taken to Oregon City to witness the unveiling of a monument in tribute to the Oregon Spectator, and the men who were associated with it during its comparatively short career.

George Himes Collects Data. The Spectator was established through the organization of the Oregon Historical Society, which the press used in printing the Spectator was a Washington hand news, bed 25 by 35 inches.
