

SEASON OF INDOOR SWIMMING IS NEAR

Multnomah Club is to Have Strong Aggregation.

PCLO FUTURE IS BRIGHT

Humphreys, Hosford, Enebrege, Wilsey, Douglas, Allen, Ewing and Others to Be in Running.

Indoor swimming will be in vogue with the closing of the swimming resorts along the river next week. This indoor season will find Multnomah club with the greatest aggregation of swimmers in the history of the club, having during the summer added many new as well as old-time swimmers and divers.

The water polo season should be a bright one this year, as it is understood the new Portland natatorium and baths will have a strong team to bid for the championship of the city. Though many of the various colleges there are still better than the usual summer left, Louis Foster, Multnomah's famous diver, will be away from the club ten days for New York City and Brownie Webster will leave for Stanford.

Buster Douglas, both a swimmer and diver, will be at Columbia and can get away for practice and competition. Myron Wilsey and Albert Enebrege will be left for the sprints and O. J. Hosford will have the honor of the distance swimming.

Bill Stemple, who finished second in the last river marathon, is back at the club and with Duke Walker as a running mate will be ready for the next ten days for New York City and Brownie Webster will leave for Stanford.

Miss Ethel Knowles and Florence Knowles are the latest additions to Multnomah's swimming team. Ethel swims the backstroke, crawl and breast stroke and with Florence will combine to give any women in the north-west a run. Helms Payne, Constance Meyer, Helen Hicks, Irene and Virginia Pembroke make up the diving team which has proved for the past three seasons superior to any country can produce and will likely hang onto its laurels.

Water polo always calls forth from hiding many of the old-timers who, though swimmers, never enter anything else, but get a thrill out of the game. Among those who will get out for the game are the Humphrey boys, Harry and Ed; Hosford, Enebrege, Wilsey, Douglas, Allen, Ewing, Stryker, Wheeler, Patterson and many others.

October 12 is the date of the national 100-yard swim for women at Neptune Beach, Alameda. This race will be the Pacific coast classic for women. Frances Schroy, one of America's greatest women swimmers, and who this year has set many new records and is swimming better this season than ever before, is looking out to uphold the honors of the coast. Dorothy Burns, of the Los Angeles club, and Helen Martin, former Portland girl, supported by Ruth Crane and David Judd will be the constant rivals who must battle the world-famous swimmers from Australia, Fanny Durack and Mina Wilsey, and their recent conquerors, Ethel and Florence Knowles.

The event will be staged in the surf just off the beach and will be a straightaway.

O. J. Hosford, chairman of Multnomah's swimming affairs, is in New York this week conferring with the officials of the Athletic Union of America, the awarding of medals for the coming year, and incidentally to look over the swimming in the metropolis. Next week he will view the swimming affairs of the middle west, which will be held in Chicago before returning home via the Canadian Rockies. He is expected home with many new ideas the second week of September.

September 8 is the latest date set for the state of Washington swimming and canoeing championships to be held at the Crystal pool, Seattle.

MABEL FRANK has worked a mile in 2:04.4, and will be started to reduce her record to 2:01.4, later in the season. She is in foal to Lu Princeton, 2:02.

A. H. Codriss, 1st General Knight will not be started this year. He cost $6025 last November.

The Acme, after chasing McGregor the Great at three meetings without showing in front, was sold at auction for $3000 at Cleveland and shipped west.

Harry Burgoese says that Mignola, 2:04.4, is the handsome trotting stallion in action, he ever saw. Cox does not agree with him. His selection is Lu Princeton, who will meet Ante Guy in the big free-for-all at Hartford on Labor day.

Wilkes Brewer, in racing trim, looks more like a galloper than any trotter trotting on the edge of the track. He is all line, while her golden coat and white trimmings make her very conspicuous when she appears in public.

The Toddler, 2:03.4, is the fastest stallion ever bred on the Pacific coast.

Periscope will be reserved for the big futurities. Her owner says that if that course had been adopted with Chestnut Peter and David Judd last year, they would have won all of them.

A few of the top liners are in the repair shop. Verlie Patton, 2:02.4, has been fixed for the lameness under her front knee. Red Bearer, 2:04.4, is nursing a big knee at Indianapolis. Her Responder, 2:04.4, Alvin Forbes, 2:04.4, Berth McGuire, 2:04.4, and Peter Worth, 2:04.4, are lame.

After Petros, 2:04.4, pulled up lame, A. W. Smith presented her to David Cook with the understanding that he was to have her first filly by Etawah, 2:03.4. He also presented the three-year-old filly Harveta, 2:03.5, to C. W. Leonard with the understanding that he was to have her first filly by Chestnut Peter, 2:04.4.

Minmark, 2:11.3, by Bingen has been broken down.

Cox sold Brother David, J. W. 2:15.4, and a couple of others at Cleveland to be raced over the half-mile tracks. He also shipped Nora Gung and Jeanette Speed, 2:08.4, to Lexington.

Binland, 2:04.4, still laid up with a lame shoulder at Springfield, Ohio.

THE 'CAUSIS BELLI' IN THE MAYS ROW!

ATTORNEY CARL GIUE'EM THE OLD SO'FAST BY NOW!

MR. COHAN OR SHUBERT IS LOOKING FOR TEMPERMENT DON CARLOS MAYS HAS MORE ON TAP THAN ANY STRIKING THESE IN N.Y.C.

IN 1915 HE WAS BOSTON'S 'FIRST AID' PHENOM.

Carl Mays, baseball's great tragedian, has all the combustible temperament and sincerity of purpose that is found in the average militant Irishman.

He pitches to win, fights to win and talks to win. In his case he did the latter, and the following facts are taken from a very fiery little conversation with the injunction kid.

It is interesting to briefly review his record that led up to the turbulent estrangement from the Red Sox. His first professional whirl was with Boise, Idaho, in 1912, during which season he won 23 games and only lost 8. Incidentally, he led the league in batting with an average of .354.

This was too good for that circuit and he was picked off by Portland in the Pacific Coast league. Without a trial he was farmed to the Portland team in the Northwest league and besides twirling a lot of winning games, played the outfield and led the league with a batting average of .354.

In the spring of 1913 he was purchased by Detroit, but Hughey Jennings, without a trout, farmed him to Providence. He won 23 games and lost 7 for the Rhode Island club and pated the seams for an average of .352.

In 1915 with Boston he only pitched ten games, winning seven, but was called the "pinch hitter" of the pennant-winning Sox. He finished games for every twirler on the club and worked 30 more innings than any other Red Sox pitcher.

He labored hard in 1916 and the following season won 22 games and lost 9. Last year he won 22 games out of 35 and hit the ball for .286.

His record with the Boston club was one year season after another. In the opening months of the present year, with Lewis and Leonard gone but Boston still conceded a chance to win, the bulk of the defensive work was saddled on Mays.

For an indefinite period he says there had been a wall of dissension coming between him and the management. Then he began to lose game after game through what seemed to be inexcusable blunders. He has nothing but the highest personal regard for every Boston player, but for some reason, he says, they seemed to go to pieces every time he was on the mound. All this added to his growing dislike for Barrows and the Boston management worried him into a fretful, nervous condition.

The beginning of the end came at New York. It was early in the race and a double-headed win would mean a lot to Boston; Barrows asked Mays to pitch both games, to which he willingly assented and shut out the Yankees in the opening. The second game was lost; 4 to 1, but with 16 Sox left on base, Mays claims by every rule of baseball luck he was entitled to a win. At any rate, he took his medicine without a kick.

Then came the anti-climax. A couple of pals Mays' weather-beaten overseas gobs called at the hotel, inviting them to the Sunday game. Mays went to the management for a pair of passes. A very small request from a man who has just pitched a double-header, to which he was refused and referred to the secretary. In turn he was again refused, owing to the alleged fact that a large Sunday crowd was expected and there were to be no passes. The conversation grew very interesting, if indeed not heated, and when Mays ventured to remark that the secretary was in the habit of giving Sunday passes to his personal friends "I was immediately reminded," Mays states, "that I was only a ballplayer."

If the wound had ever started to heal, it was now laid wide open. The jump to Chicago gave him plenty of opportunity to brood over his many grievances, but when called upon to face the White Sox he marched to the mound. Right off the bat things broke bad and when, in the fifth inning, his own catcher accidentally hit him in the head with a returned ball, Mays literally hit the ceiling.

When the team went to the bench Mays went to the shower bath, a bundle of jumping nerves. That night he caught a train for Boston, but before climbing aboard penned a letter to Barrows terminating in his now famous statement, "I can pitch for you with my arm, but not with my heart and mind."

And he added, "No pitcher can win that way." Barrows wired to Boston asking him to reconsider, to which he repeatedly the sentiments of his

ON THE ALLEYS.

Blaney is one of those in favor of the idea and when the tournaments get under way Portland may be represented by several teams at least, as the Portland alleys as well as the Oregon alleys will more than likely put forth several teams in the field.

THE PACIFIC COAST BOWLING SEASON IN PORTLAND WILL OFFICIALLY GET UNDER WAY ON SEPTEMBER 15, WHEN THE LEAGUE SEASON WILL OPEN ON THE OREGON ALLEYS.

The secretaries of the various bowling leagues are preparing for a banner season on the alleys and the managers of the rival quinquets are finding good talent in abundance, because of the return of many of the cities best bowlers from the service.

San Francisco will not only be represented by several five-man teams at the American bowling congress which is staged in Peoria, Ill., next year but will also have a five-woman team entered.

The Pacific Coast Bowling association was organized in 1915, at which time the annual tournament opened with 25 five-man teams entered. The following year the tournament was staged at San Jose, Cal., with an entrance of 36 five-man teams and a corresponding number of single and double entries.

In 1918 the tournament was staged in Los Angeles with 46 five-man teams entered. This year the tournament was held in San Francisco last May, and 63 five-man teams from all over the west participated. There were also 63 double entries and 178 singles. Three thousand dollars in prize money and nine gold medals were distributed.

It is estimated that over 100 teams will compete in the 1920 championships in Oakland.
