

MOTHERS' CLASSES SCREENS UNCLE TOM'S CABIN

Politechnic School Offers Special Courses.

PRACTICAL LESSONS GIVEN

Account-Keeping, Figuring, Letter Writing, Banking, English, Cooking on List.

Haven't you sometimes, Mrs. Housewife, sat down and puzzled over your accounts and longed for a little advice in handling figures and doing banking or wished you had paid more attention to English when in school, so that you could write a business letter without fumbling it?

There are a lot more in town just like you and they have appealed to the public schools for help. As a result, classes will open this week at the Girls' Polytechnic school, where a mother may go and ask all the questions she desires and get some of that long neglected practical education in just ten lessons.

The beauty of these classes is that they will be held up only of adults and the mother need not fear that the younger generation will scoff.

The Portland trade school for girls is now one of the most complete institutions of its kind in the west and the new courses being put in this fall will add greatly to its scope and efficiency.

Adult classes are offered in practically every department and are designed to appeal particularly to the busy woman who can come in only a few days at a time. Their popularity is assured and already the millinery department is filled up and there are but a few places left for those desiring instruction in sewing. However, more will be opened within a few weeks.

Cooking Courses Offered.

In the cooking department particularly, seasonal work is being given first attention. Two new courses are being offered here, one of eight lessons on canning, preserving and pickling fruits, meats and fish and another of ten lessons on making soups, stews, jellies. It will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2 to 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Housekeepers may also take advantage of the craft training classes which will open tomorrow in art metal work, basketry and needlecraft, and women will be able to take their choice of these. The work will be given on Friday mornings from 10 to 12 o'clock and will probably last until the holidays.

Most interesting to many of the girls is the making of hats. Only 15 women can be accommodated in the class, the enrollment fee for which is 25 cents. This will be a good opportunity to make expensive presents.

Greatest interest centers around the experiment in offering academic subjects for adults in courses in accounting had come in for courses in accounting.

and English and it was at last decided to try these Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. English will be taught from 2 o'clock to 3:45 and accounting from 2:45 to 3 in order that those who desire may take both courses. Correct usage, avoidance of common errors, pronunciation, simple sentence construction, household bookkeeping, writing checks, figuring interest, discounts and balances will be part of the work taken up.

Building Equipment Good. With new equipment throughout the building, everything freshly painted and the third floor almost completely made over, the Girls' Polytechnic school is preparing for more extensive work than ever before. Principal among the changes was the installation of a complete cafeteria on the upper floor, replacing the old lunch room. This is fitted with a table by which foods can be kept warm and has a regulation cafeteria kitchen.

Every girl in the building is required to eat in the lunch room, but she may bring her own meal or buy all or part of it at the school. Dishes are cleared by the students themselves and stacked on roll-top tables, which carry them into the kitchen, where an automatic dishwashing machine has been installed.

Cook Stoves Used. The school is getting further away from gas plate work and is concentrating on real cook stoves. In fact, the building has about as many gas ranges as it has plates.

An innovation this year in the construction of four new kitchens which replace the old hollow square of work tables and plates, formerly used exclusively. Each of these has a gas cook top, sink and cabinet, complete, and that, as nearly as possible, home conditions prevail. These kitchens are all in the same main room, but each is also designed to educate the most wholesome foods are provided almost at cost. The pupils aid in marketing, preparing estimates in the classes for the share of the meal each is to provide. The more advanced will soon do apprentice work in the cafeteria kitchen, where they will learn to do cooking on a big scale.

Groups of four are assigned to the miniature rooms and are required to prepare and serve a complete meal. The practice dining room is close by and here special luncheons are served to visitors. The art department operates in providing place cards and the girls handle other table arrangements.

Nearly all of the cooking classes are in the morning and, as far as possible, they provide food for the cafeteria. When a group has become proficient in the making of soups, stews and jellies, a day is set aside and the students prepare an amount sufficient for the cafeteria.

Canning Receives Attention. Canning is now receiving much attention. The girls are permitted to bring their own fruit or vegetables from home for preserving. Those who do not care to do this part of the work, act as assistants in the cafeteria during the winter.

The new equipment on the third floor includes a hot laundry tub for use in the course in home laundry. Here instruction is given in the washing of fine fabrics, sweaters and woollens. Dishpan and could not be carried on a large enough scale. In the sewing department, where many garments are removed, it was found that the girls for the most part did not know how to properly rip, clean and press garments they were making.

It is expected to do all this at school.
