

BONES OF GIANT PREHISTORIC ELEPHANT FOUND IN OREGON

Remains of Imperial Animal Which Stood 13 1/2 Feet High Photographed by Corvallis Professor.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY SHANNON AND ANCIENT CURIOS.

PROOF that wild elephants roamed over the plains of Oregon thousands of years ago and lived in the Willamette valley region has been found in the discovery of the bones and powerful teeth of a gigantic elephant which were unearthed September 25 on the Benton county highway, two and one-half miles north of Monroe. The bones were saved from destruction at the hands of workmen by Mrs. Ida M. Shannon, who was superintending the digging and who realized that teeth with a grinding surface eight inches long belonged to no ordinary animal. Mrs. Shannon noted George F. Sykes, professor of zoology, and J. B. Horner, professor of history, at the Oregon Agricultural college, who, with G. W. Kabie, county agent, went to Monroe at once to investigate the find. The bones were photographed by Professor Horner and identified by Professor Sykes as the remains of the Imperial elephant, which stood 13 1/2 feet high—2 1/2 feet higher than the largest elephants of today—and which geologists assert lived anywhere from 500,000 to 1,000,000 years ago. "This is the largest and oldest of North American elephants," said Professor Sykes, "and is supposed to have existed at the time that the Java man and the Heidelberg gorilla man were alive in Asia and Europe. No clear evidence of elephants in North America in this period has yet been found. "At this time, known as the early Pleistocene period, the coast line of Oregon is said to have been more than 1000 feet higher than it is now and the climate was very cold. Great glaciers were believed to have originated in Africa, wandered through Asia, and found their way to America later subsided into the ocean. "This particular species was characterized by its enormous stature and the large size of its grinding molars adapted for crunching the tough vegetation of the plains. The tusks were large, turning outward, upward and then inward again, almost meeting at the tips, very different from the tusks of present-day elephants, which are straight and short. "The Imperial elephant is a western type, never having been found east of the Mississippi. From the distribution of the bones it is supposed that the big fellow lived almost entirely on the plains, stumping the forests. This is probably the first specimen found west of the Cascades. The finding of the bones by the Shannons makes a story by itself. Mr. Shannon, who is in charge of the installing of a new logging camp near Monroe, noticed that the drinking water obtained from a spring which oozed up through the clay soil at the roadside did not taste just right and he ordered a workman to clean out the spring. Mrs. Shannon, a well-known portrait painter, who is camping out with her husband, stayed to direct the work and determine what was tainting the water. To her surprise huge fragments of bone and large teeth in nearly perfect condition were uncovered by the man, and she ordered the work stopped until the bones could be photographed. When the bones had been examined by the college men and the historical value established Mrs. Shannon presented the collection to the Oregon Agricultural college, where they are now on exhibit in the museum in Corvallis. Entomologists who have been taking occasional drinks from the roadside spring for many years will no doubt be surprised to know that they were really tasting "antique soup," as Mrs. Shannon now calls it.

New Hair Growth After BALDNESS HAIR GROWN ON MR. BRITAIN'S BALD HEAD BY INDIANS' MYSTERIOUS HAIR GROWER My head at the top and back was absolutely bald. The scalp was shiny. An expert said that as he thought the hair roots were extinct, and there was no hope of my ever having a new hair growth. Yet now, at an age over 56, I have a luxuriant growth of soft, strong, lustrous hair! No trace of baldness. The pictures show here are from my photographs. Indians' Secret of Hair Growth At a time when I had become discouraged at trying various hair lotions, tonics, specialists' treatments, etc., I came across, in my travels, a Cherokee Indian "medicine man" who had an elixir that he asserted would grow my hair. Although I had but little faith, I gave it a trial. To my amazement a light fuzz soon appeared. It developed, day by day, into a healthy growth, and ere long my hair was as prolific as in my youthful days. That I was astonished and happy is expressing my state of mind mildly. Obviously, the hair roots had not been dead, but were dormant in the scalp, awaiting the fertilizing potency of the mysterious pomade. I negotiated for and came into possession of the principle for preparing this mysterious elixir, called Kotalko, and later had the recipe put into practical form by a chemist. That my own hair growth was permanent has been amply proved. Many men and women, who reported satisfactory results from Kotalko. How YOU May Grow YOUR Hair My honest belief is that hair roots rarely die even when the hair falls out through dandruff, fever, excessive dressings, etc. I have been told by experts that often when hair falls out the roots become imbedded in the scalp, covered by hard skin, so that they remain for a time like bulbs or seeds in a bottle which will grow when fertilized. Shampoo (which contains alkalis) and hair lotions which contain alcohol are enemies to the hair as they dry it, making it brittle. Kotalko contains those elements in nature which give new vitality to the scalp and hair. PROVE FOR YOURSELF Get a box of the genuine Kotalko at a reliable druggist's $300.00 GUARANTEE with each box. A small testing box of Kotalko (with testimonials, etc.) may be obtained by sending ten cents, silver or stamps, to my address below. JOHN HART BRITAIN, BD-216, Station F, New York City
