

30 PLANES ASKED FOR FIRE PATROL

Extension of Service to All Northwest Is Indorsed.

WORK IS GOOD TRAINING

Army Air Service Believes That Government Holdings Will Be Saved by Fire Spotters.

If recommendations of the head of the western department air service of the United States army are approved, forest fire patrol by airplane of the timbered area of the entire northwest will be undertaken during the season of 1920, according to information brought out yesterday at a meeting of a special committee of the Western Forestry and Conservation association, held in the association's offices in this city, at which plans were considered whereby the association might co-operate with the government air service.

The Western Forestry and Conservation association is an organization representing the timber interests in the five states of Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California, and the committee of 15 members on the co-operation of the association with the government in airplane patrol is composed of the state foresters, representatives from the federal forest service and representatives of the private timber interests in each of the states.

Thorough Patrol Indorsed.
At the meeting yesterday the report of Colonel H. H. Arnold, head of the air service for the western department, which urges the establishment of a thorough airplane patrol for the Pacific northwest next year, was unanimously indorsed and steps were taken to provide machinery for the new work which protection agencies will have to undertake in order to insure the maximum benefit being derived from the air patrol.

The area to be covered by patrol embraces one-third of all the standing timber in the United States and the bulk of the timber owned by the United States government is in this area. Plans for patrol contemplate the use of 30 airplanes with pilots and observers for each. These planes will be operated from three bases and nine sub-bases as follows: Bases, Mather field, Cal.; Camp Lewis, Wash., and Missoula, Mont.; sub-bases, Eugene, Medford and La Grande, Oregon; Fresno and Red Bluff, Cal.; Spokane, Wash.; Boise, Idaho; Cody, Wyo., and Helena, Mont.

Each to Have Radio.
Each ship will be equipped with wireless so that location of fires discovered can be promptly sent to wireless receiving stations at bases and sub-bases and from these transmitted by telephone to the fire wardens. To furnish means for sending messages from remote places in case of forced landings homing pigeons will be carried by aviators on all flights. Men in the employ of private protection agencies will be located at each base and sub-base to advise and co-operate with air service officials and maintain the closest relations between the air patrol and protection agencies.

At the meeting yesterday the opinion was expressed by those who have given the matter close study and have investigated the air patrol as carried on in California and Oregon during the past season, that with greater perfection in organization and better equipment enormous good can come from air patrol in saving timber from forest fires.

Good Training Provided.
It was also pointed out that the patrol of areas in which are located enormous government timber holdings is particularly appropriate, since such patrol furnishes needed training for aviators, while at the same time it aids in the conservation of government property.

At the conclusion of the meeting the committee adopted the following resolution:
After study of the results secured in protection of the forests of Oregon and California through air patrol the season of 1919, and realizing that perfection of the service, through added efforts on the part of protection agencies and the air service, greater efficiency can be secured, we urge extension of air patrol to cover all forests, federal, state and private, in western Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California, and pledge the fullest co-operation and assistance in making such patrol a success.

We believe the United States should take a leading place among the nations of the world in aeronautics, and further that the use of airplanes to protect the nation's forests gives opportunity for the training of pilots and observers, while serving a purpose which fully justifies the expense involved.

We heartily indorse the report of Colonel H. H. Arnold, director of air service, training and operations group to the department air service office under date of November 10, 1919, and request the war department the approval of this report at an early date to the end that steps may be immediately taken to perfect patrol of our forests by airplane during the coming season.

In this connection it is pointed out that the work being done upon this committee in connection with the patrol is such that in order to carry out our part of the program notification of the war department's intentions is necessary at an early date.

We request that the signal corps, United States army, furnish, install and operate wireless telegraph receiving sets, S. C. R. 48 A., at each base, sub-base and auxiliary landing field selected for the air patrol in the states of Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California, in order that fires discovered by aviators on patrol may be promptly reported to protection agencies and steps for extinguishment of fires speedily taken.

The chairman of this committee is requested to see that copies of the resolutions are sent to the following: Secretary of war, secretary of agriculture, chief of air service, U. S. A.; chief of signal office, U. S. A.; each member of the congressional delegations of the six states above mentioned; Colonel H. H. Arnold; forester, U. S. forest service, Washington, D. C.; heads of all protective associations in the Pacific northwest. And that it be plainly indicated that the resolution expresses the sentiment of all agencies, federal, state and private, throughout the northwest.

MAN-PATCHING NECESSITY

REPAIRING INDUSTRIAL INJURIES CALLED VITAL.

State Officials Find Employers Are Willing to Aid in Reclamation of Human Beings.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 22.—(Special.)—Rehabilitation of the man who is incapacitated through industrial injuries is the big movement of the future, according to H. L. Hughes, state industrial insurance commissioner, who is a visitor here.

"We have found employers all over the state ready and willing to assist us in every instance where we have attempted to fit disabled men into positions which they can handle," he said last night. "The men themselves recognize the readiness to help and through the agency of the industrial insurance commission we have been able to achieve more than a little in salvaging men thrown into the discard through serious accidents which impaired their usefulness, although we have no fund for the work."

"Congress has realized the importance of the work and recently made an appropriation of $1,000,000 for industrial reconstruction purposes, the sum to be matched by the states, and we hope that the state of Washington will meet the opportunity offered. We have found in our work that the cases wherein we cannot secure success are those in which the injured man has become so discouraged through the months of his illness that his desire for useful citizenship has vanished."

"It is the necessity of keeping the minds of the men alert while they are under treatment that the government has recognized as all important in re-training soldiers, and our dream is to approximate its efforts in this state eventually, in addition to providing means for re-educating individuals."
