

'IN-LAWS' ACCUSED BY MRS. HAWLEY

Paper - Maker Reported to Have Backed Son in Fight.

'INSULTS' ARE CITED

Husband Asks That Order Be Set Aside on Legal Grounds While Wife Makes New Demands.

OREGON CITY, Or., Nov. 29.—(Special.)—Developments in the Hawley divorce case followed each other in quick succession today. Willard P. Hawley Jr., the defendant, filing a motion to annul Judge Campbell's order directing him to pay into court $500 suit money, $7500 attorney fees and $1000 temporary alimony. He contended that the order of the court is in effect taking his property from him without due process of law and that the court had no jurisdiction, as no summons had been served upon him prior to the issuance of the order. The defense also filed a motion to make the complaint more definite and certain and asking that the plaintiff be required to give the dates of the alleged mistreatment complained of and to give the names of the plaintiffs "alred help" in the presence of whom the alleged acts of the defendant occurred.

"In-laws" Insult, Says Wife. Later in the day Mrs. Willard Hawley Jr. filed an affidavit alleging that her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard P. Hawley Sr., have continuously resided at her home since the original suit was filed; that their conduct has been obnoxious and insulting; that her husband has said that her baby would be taken from her, and she has asked for an order enjoining her husband's parents from coming upon the premises. Mrs. Hawley Jr. also presented an affidavit charging her husband with having served notice on various persons that he would not be responsible for her purchases; that he has stated he would keep the case in court for three years; that his father has asserted he would spend his last nickel in fighting the case; that Mr. Hawley Sr. is worth about $1,000,000 and is assisting his son in fighting her suit; that her husband receives a salary of $1000 a month from the Hawley Pulp and Paper company; and that his income is about $60,000 a year.

More Money Asked for. She asks for an additional $500 a month as temporary alimony, for an additional $500 as suit money and an additional $2500 for attorney fees. In the original order Mr. Hawley Jr. is restrained from disposing of his stock in the Hawley Pulp & Paper company, and application is made to set this order aside. The several motions will be argued before a judge of the circuit court here, sitting in place of Judge J. U. Campbell, who will step aside upon an affidavit of prejudice filed by Mr. Hawley several days ago. Frank B. Dimick and Griffith, Lister & Allen appear for Mr. Hawley, whose wife is represented by C. Schueler.

DEMAND SENT TO NITTI

ITALIAN SOCIALISTS WANT RUSS PRISONERS RELEASED.

Soldiers Interned on Island; Coercion to Induce Them to Fight Bolsheviks is Charged.

ROME, Nov. 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—The directorate of the socialist party today wrote Premier Nitti demanding that Russian prisoners taken over by Italy from Austria-Hungary be released unconditionally.

The socialists say they will undertake to provide work by which the Russians may support themselves if they desire to remain in Italy. They also demand that the government negotiate with the existing Russian governments for the repatriation of the prisoners.

The Russians are interned on the island of Asinara, off the coast of Sardinia. The socialists claim that the Russians are being unjustly treated, Italy not being at war with Russia. It is pointed out besides that these Russians fought with the enemy against the central powers.

The letter accuses the government of co-operating with the "dictators," Koltchak and Denikine, by permitting the Russian military mission in Italy to conduct propaganda among the prisoners for the object of inducing them to enlist in the Koltchak and Denikine armies.

The propagandists are charged with using inhuman means to coerce the prisoners.

"WE'RE TOO BUSY," REPLY

Several Housewives Show More Interest in Restoring Capital Punishment in Oregon.

ein families, several property owners descended from pioneers, a civil war veteran and a number of newly-married couples. Among these families there dwell several large manufacturers and men who have held public offices.

53 Housewives Consulted.

Before darkness set in 53 houses had been visited. Of these 11 housewives were not at home, but this was balanced by finding more than one woman at various places, so that the final count showed that 53 had actually been consulted.

Every one of these women, with one exception, said the question had never been given any previous thought, yet 11 said they had always been strongly in favor of anything for the good of women's suffrage.

The woman of obvious foreign extraction, while two of them voted occasionally were not interested. At a third home a small dark woman, about whose skirts a group of young children, curiously dismissed the caller with, "Naw, I ain't never registered."

"Where children came to the door and their parents were not home, those of high school age invariably took the visitor and their mother did not vote and did not talk politics at home. At one of these places it was as discovered that even the father never visited the polls.

The five women who advocate a special session to find out if they were unique among their neighbors. There were the mother and daughter previously mentioned and a woman at her house, a guest, who lives in Clackamas county and was in the city a few days, and last, one of very definite sentiments.

"We've been getting too teapartyish and crabbed," she declared. "I'm going out and do my part to see that we get the special session. I'm strong for it and think that in justice to women of other states we ought to see that the privilege of the ballot is extended."

Death Penalty Favored. This woman's neighbor across the street desired a special session, but for an entirely different reason. "I don't care much about the ballot," she said, "but a special session would insure us the return of capital punishment. I say we should have one as quickly as we can get it."

This was not an exceptional case. Many of the women showed much more interest in the capital punishment issue than in the suffrage one. One was willing to discuss this at great length, but said she preferred to have her husband attend to the family's voting and was not enthusiastic over the desire of eastern suffragettes.

"I don't think the average woman cares," was the popular saying of many a housewife when questioned as to how her friends feel about the question. That expression seems to mean that they take no interest in elections until after they are all over and some man is in office whom they don't like. Then they begin to kick.

Another who had also been employed at the polls and who is an ardent advocate of equal suffrage, said she would not oppose the movement, but believed the expense of calling the legislature together at this time would be an untimely and unnecessary one. This woman, despite her close association with community politics, demanded a thorough explanation of the entire situation and confessed she did not even know that suffrage circles are concerning themselves with the Oregon legislature. Responses Are Identical. Responses to questions were almost identical everywhere. They are a few of the standard answers: "My housework is all I have time to think about. This question never would't save yes or no as I haven't occurred to me. I don't vote anyhow."

"I'm interested in seeing women vote, but I'm not a politician and I'm not going to sit up and howl for a special session if the governor doesn't care to call one."

"I'm not opposed to the session, but whether it is wise to go to the expense of calling one, I don't know. I wouldn't say yes or no as I haven't studied the question or ever thought about it before."

"No, I don't care about it at all. Women's suffrage agitation is all bunk anyway. I never bother about it. Some club women have nothing else to think about, but we who have our children and houses to care for have no time for such agitation. I don't vote anyhow."

Indifference Is Shown. "I don't know a thing about it, haven't even read up on it. I don't think the average woman with children cares about such matters."

"I vote, but don't believe in doing so if I don't understand a question. I'm not even interested in this. I'm too busy with the babies to think about it."

"I'm interested in anything for women's suffrage but hadn't heard of this proposition."

In some homes there was not absolute harmony on the matter. One young woman and her mother were strongly in favor of the ratification session, while the latter's sister held that it would be too expensive. At another place where three women were living all agreed that while they favored the cause, they considered many things more important at the present time and held that Oregon can not afford to be in other states' fight, as this one has to obtain an equal franchise.

Many Fall to Vote. The women of obvious foreign extraction, while two of them voted occasionally were not interested. At a third home a small dark woman, about whose skirts a group of young children, curiously dismissed the caller with, "Naw, I ain't never registered."

Where children came to the door and their parents were not home, those of high school age invariably took the visitor and their mother did not vote and did not talk politics at home. At one of these places it was as discovered that even the father never visited the polls.
