Antelope are known to naturalists as the most wary of the wild animals. At Yellowstone National park the officials have expended every dollar at their disposal to buy hay for the antelope, deer and elk deprived of forage by the heavy snowfall. Baby Robert M. Albright was recently caught by the camera as he fed a young antelope that driven by hunger lost its natural fear of the near approach of human beings.

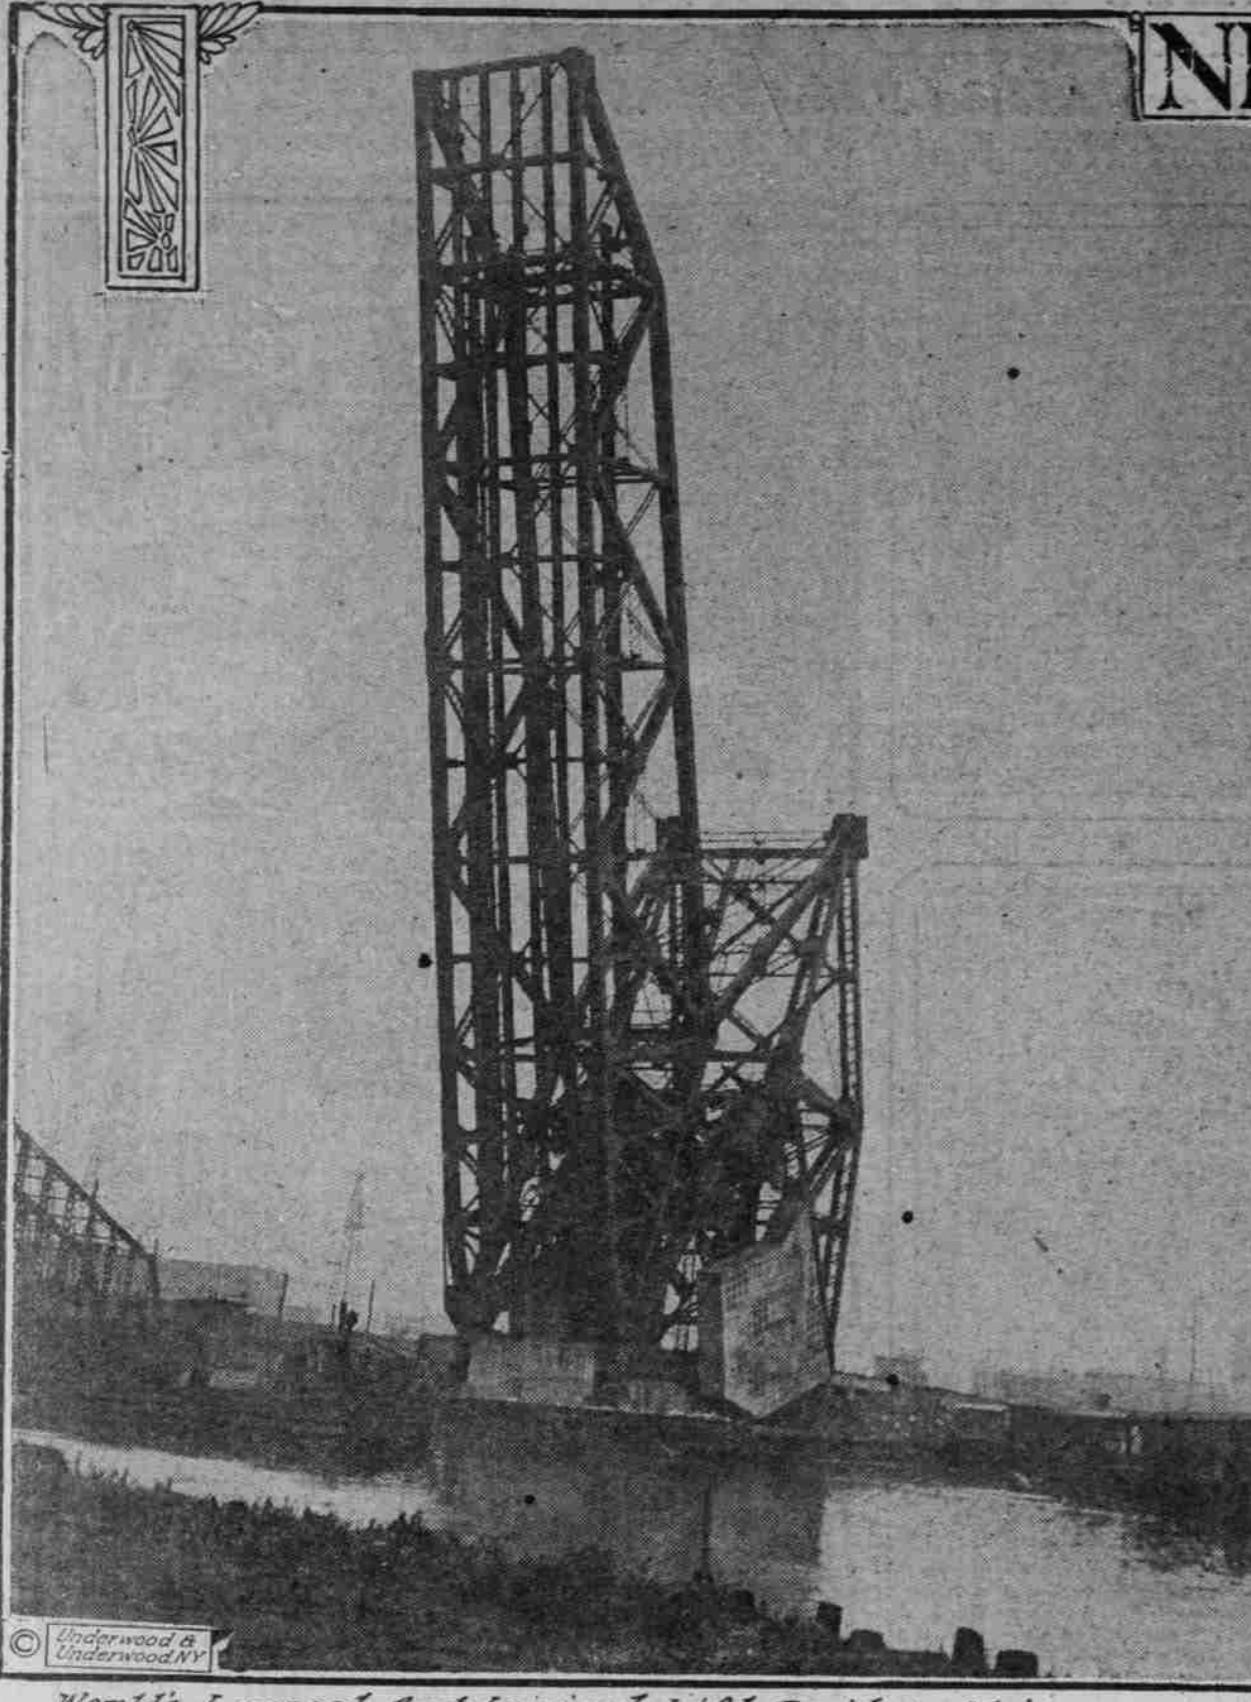

With a newly-invented armor diving suit, John F. Turner of Philadelphia, has performed work on the ocean bed at a depth of 350 feet. The inventor of this device is a colored mechanic, Charles H. Jackson. The diver is lowered and raised by a winch operated over a derrick arm. The first test to which this new suit will be applied is a projected attempt to recover $2,000,000 worth of gold bullion from the hold of the British liner Laurentic torpedoed by the Germans off the Irish coast.

Henry Clay Frick willed to the city of New York his palatial home at Fifth avenue and Seventieth street as a museum for the art collection it contains, said to be the finest in America. The Polish Rider, by Rembrandt, is said to be one of the best paintings and is valued at $500,000.

Dr. and Mrs. Wilfred Grenfell, medical missionaries to Labrador, recently visited the United States in the interest of establishing institutes for North Sea fishermen as an appreciation for the heroic work performed in maintaining patrols in the mine fields during the war. Twelve of Dr. Grenfell's cousins made the supreme sacrifice during the conflict. He is well-known in society circles at the national capital and was best man at the marriage of Mrs. Jessie Wilson, daughter of the president, to Mr. Sayre.

In a New York bank a "pill-box" has been built in a commanding position in the lobby, wherein two armed guards are constantly on duty to protect against robbery. Armed with high-power rifles, they can cover the entire floor space of the institution with the guns.

Belgians are establishing themselves in homes built from the wreckage of war. At Ypres an "estimet" or cafe has been built with circular strips of corrugated iron salvaged from dugouts. Living rooms for the family have been arranged in the rear of the queer building.
