

Sunday Oregonian

ESTABLISHED BY HENRY L. FITCOCK. Published by The Oregonian Publishing Co., 225 Sixth Street, Portland, Ore.

The Oregonian is a member of the Associated Press. It is not responsible for the contents of news dispatches credited to it or for other news appearing in this paper.

Subscription Rates—Invariably in Advance. Daily, Sunday included, one year, $5.00.

How to Remit—Send postal note money order, express or personal check on your bank. Do not send cash. Give postoffice address in full, including zip.

Postage Rates—12 to 16 pages, 1 cent; 17 to 20 pages, 2 cents; 21 to 24 pages, 3 cents; 25 to 30 pages, 4 cents; 31 to 36 pages, 5 cents; 37 to 42 pages, 6 cents.

Eastern Business Office—Verrez & Conklin, Inc., Brunswick Building, New York, Verrez & Conklin, Inc., 100 Broadway, New York.

FOR THE THIRD PARTY TO DECIDE.

There is not much reason to hope that the new industrial conference appointed by President Wilson will accomplish more towards ending industrial strife than did the first.

The conference has reached a stage where the public must assert its rights as superior to those of both combatants. Both sides must enforce them.

It has been the case with the steel and coal strikes that the public is likely to be the result of a general strike in any industry dealing with the necessities of life.

Constant assertion by the government of the paramount right of the public in labor disputes would be possible if backed by alert and sustained public opinion.

The main cause of strife has been that, while both employer and workmen have talked much about settling for justice, both parties cling to opportunities of securing more than justice by fighting out their differences.

It is high time for the third party—the public—to step in, act as umpire and enforce its decisions. It is not to do this through any such body as the industrial conference, if it is small, appointive, will serve only for a brief period and has power only to deliberate and resolve, not to act.

We are not surprised by the statement that Professor Ernest Rutherford did not lay claim to having discovered the secret of the transmutation of metals; that this was the work of an earlier house committee.

that he has made it that much easier for his successors to make progress toward the goal. By certain conclusions as to what the atom is not, he has simplified the field of future investigation.

Something Different. Chairman Hays proposes to set every ambitious young man and woman in the country to work hammering out a platform for the republican national convention.

A New Complaint. The Oregonian finds itself so greatly surprised and flabbergasted at the newest complaint from upstate against Portland and the Portland papers that it gives space to its full text.

BUCKWHEAT AND PROHIBITION. It is important news, from the viewpoint of the economist, that an overwhelming demand has developed in urban eating places for sausage and buckwheat cakes.

PLUMB PLAN PROPAGANDA. A fair sample of the mendacious propaganda which is put out in support of the Plumb plan for soviet operation of railroads under government ownership is contained in an article in The Daily Chronicle.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

THE BUCKWHEAT STRIKE. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

THE BUCKWHEAT STRIKE. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

Less progress has been made in this respect than in the case of the age of retirement is approached. The striking difference between the kind of dependency calling for help from the married and from the unmarried consists in the distance of arriving at an equitable solution.

A PIONEER TYPE. "All kinds of labor," wrote the Rev. Ezra Fisher, in a letter dated at Oregon City, Oct. 1, 1850, "is richly rewarded."

HOW TO END A FEW TROUBLES. A few facts were stated to the senate by Senator Jones a few days ago which are very much at the point at this time, when the threat of a coal famine has just been lifted and when sawmills are closed or running part time for lack of cars.

BUILDING A GREAT RAILROAD. Edward L. Sabin, who writes the story of the "Building of the Pacific Railroad," describing an event the semi-centenary of which was celebrated last May, observes that one of the striking facts connected with that great enterprise, which deserved to be called the "golden spike of the world," was that the labor which made it possible was then "100 per cent efficient."

There is no ideal climate. Just now New York is suffering from the cold Christmas day storms in general, yet people persist in staying there by the millions. We have a notion that if a climatic Utopia were to be found it would attract the population of the world, and would become intolerable.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

Less progress has been made in this respect than in the case of the age of retirement is approached. The striking difference between the kind of dependency calling for help from the married and from the unmarried consists in the distance of arriving at an equitable solution.

A PIONEER TYPE. "All kinds of labor," wrote the Rev. Ezra Fisher, in a letter dated at Oregon City, Oct. 1, 1850, "is richly rewarded."

HOW TO END A FEW TROUBLES. A few facts were stated to the senate by Senator Jones a few days ago which are very much at the point at this time, when the threat of a coal famine has just been lifted and when sawmills are closed or running part time for lack of cars.

BUILDING A GREAT RAILROAD. Edward L. Sabin, who writes the story of the "Building of the Pacific Railroad," describing an event the semi-centenary of which was celebrated last May, observes that one of the striking facts connected with that great enterprise, which deserved to be called the "golden spike of the world," was that the labor which made it possible was then "100 per cent efficient."

There is no ideal climate. Just now New York is suffering from the cold Christmas day storms in general, yet people persist in staying there by the millions. We have a notion that if a climatic Utopia were to be found it would attract the population of the world, and would become intolerable.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

Less progress has been made in this respect than in the case of the age of retirement is approached. The striking difference between the kind of dependency calling for help from the married and from the unmarried consists in the distance of arriving at an equitable solution.

A PIONEER TYPE. "All kinds of labor," wrote the Rev. Ezra Fisher, in a letter dated at Oregon City, Oct. 1, 1850, "is richly rewarded."

HOW TO END A FEW TROUBLES. A few facts were stated to the senate by Senator Jones a few days ago which are very much at the point at this time, when the threat of a coal famine has just been lifted and when sawmills are closed or running part time for lack of cars.

BUILDING A GREAT RAILROAD. Edward L. Sabin, who writes the story of the "Building of the Pacific Railroad," describing an event the semi-centenary of which was celebrated last May, observes that one of the striking facts connected with that great enterprise, which deserved to be called the "golden spike of the world," was that the labor which made it possible was then "100 per cent efficient."

There is no ideal climate. Just now New York is suffering from the cold Christmas day storms in general, yet people persist in staying there by the millions. We have a notion that if a climatic Utopia were to be found it would attract the population of the world, and would become intolerable.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

Less progress has been made in this respect than in the case of the age of retirement is approached. The striking difference between the kind of dependency calling for help from the married and from the unmarried consists in the distance of arriving at an equitable solution.

A PIONEER TYPE. "All kinds of labor," wrote the Rev. Ezra Fisher, in a letter dated at Oregon City, Oct. 1, 1850, "is richly rewarded."

HOW TO END A FEW TROUBLES. A few facts were stated to the senate by Senator Jones a few days ago which are very much at the point at this time, when the threat of a coal famine has just been lifted and when sawmills are closed or running part time for lack of cars.

BUILDING A GREAT RAILROAD. Edward L. Sabin, who writes the story of the "Building of the Pacific Railroad," describing an event the semi-centenary of which was celebrated last May, observes that one of the striking facts connected with that great enterprise, which deserved to be called the "golden spike of the world," was that the labor which made it possible was then "100 per cent efficient."

There is no ideal climate. Just now New York is suffering from the cold Christmas day storms in general, yet people persist in staying there by the millions. We have a notion that if a climatic Utopia were to be found it would attract the population of the world, and would become intolerable.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

Less progress has been made in this respect than in the case of the age of retirement is approached. The striking difference between the kind of dependency calling for help from the married and from the unmarried consists in the distance of arriving at an equitable solution.

A PIONEER TYPE. "All kinds of labor," wrote the Rev. Ezra Fisher, in a letter dated at Oregon City, Oct. 1, 1850, "is richly rewarded."

HOW TO END A FEW TROUBLES. A few facts were stated to the senate by Senator Jones a few days ago which are very much at the point at this time, when the threat of a coal famine has just been lifted and when sawmills are closed or running part time for lack of cars.

BUILDING A GREAT RAILROAD. Edward L. Sabin, who writes the story of the "Building of the Pacific Railroad," describing an event the semi-centenary of which was celebrated last May, observes that one of the striking facts connected with that great enterprise, which deserved to be called the "golden spike of the world," was that the labor which made it possible was then "100 per cent efficient."

There is no ideal climate. Just now New York is suffering from the cold Christmas day storms in general, yet people persist in staying there by the millions. We have a notion that if a climatic Utopia were to be found it would attract the population of the world, and would become intolerable.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

Less progress has been made in this respect than in the case of the age of retirement is approached. The striking difference between the kind of dependency calling for help from the married and from the unmarried consists in the distance of arriving at an equitable solution.

A PIONEER TYPE. "All kinds of labor," wrote the Rev. Ezra Fisher, in a letter dated at Oregon City, Oct. 1, 1850, "is richly rewarded."

HOW TO END A FEW TROUBLES. A few facts were stated to the senate by Senator Jones a few days ago which are very much at the point at this time, when the threat of a coal famine has just been lifted and when sawmills are closed or running part time for lack of cars.

BUILDING A GREAT RAILROAD. Edward L. Sabin, who writes the story of the "Building of the Pacific Railroad," describing an event the semi-centenary of which was celebrated last May, observes that one of the striking facts connected with that great enterprise, which deserved to be called the "golden spike of the world," was that the labor which made it possible was then "100 per cent efficient."

There is no ideal climate. Just now New York is suffering from the cold Christmas day storms in general, yet people persist in staying there by the millions. We have a notion that if a climatic Utopia were to be found it would attract the population of the world, and would become intolerable.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.

RESponsibilities of the Unmarried. The common supposition that married persons have a greater number of dependents than the unmarried receives a partial setback from the result of a survey recently conducted in several eastern educational institutions by an investigator who was surprised by desire to ascertain whether a system of age retirement pensions which discriminated against the unmarried was founded on equity.