

BABY HOMES REFUSE TO DIVULGE SECRETS

Break With Child Welfare Commission Threatened.

DEMAND HELD IMPROPER

Director Says Information Would Cause Broken Homes and Ruined Lives if Given Out.

Trouble brewing between the child welfare commission and children's homes in Portland threatens to reach an open break as the result of demands for data made upon these institutions for which, it is maintained, there is no warrant in law. In at least four cases some of the information asked has been refused point-blank in the face of threats to withhold license.

Chief objection is that such information would be accessible to the public and might cause broken homes and ruined lives, though informal denial was made yesterday that public perusal of confidential records would be permitted by the welfare commission.

Demand Held Too Great.

Next Monday afternoon Franklin Thomas, chairman of the child welfare commission, has agreed to appear before the board of trustees of the Boys' and Girls Aid society and explain the matter.

"The law of 1919," declared F. Teuscher, superintendent of the aid society, "provides that institutions may be called on to disclose locations and relations of children placed out. Now the commission asks for 27 additional items, calling for such facts as the cause of dependency, illegitimacy and the like. We are perfectly willing to give all that the law requires, because the commission must keep the two matters mentioned confidential. If we furnished more than the law requires we would have no protection and relatives and parents would immediately get in touch with those children taken from them by the courts. We are all objecting on the same grounds—simply that the commission is asking much more than the law requires."

Waverley Director Explains.

"The ruining of several lives and the breaking up of families through the exposition of the acts of some members would be possible if the confidential records of the Waverley Baby home were made accessible to the public," said Mrs. T. C. Allison, president of the directors, yesterday, in explaining why the requested information thus far had been refused.

"The child welfare commission threatens to withhold our license, without which we will be forced to close our doors, unless we comply with the demands made. We believe that we have good reason for holding back the records of the babies, for the strictest confidence always has been observed by us in such matters."

Information Refused.

Rev. W. G. MacLaren, speaking for the Louise home and the Albertina Kerr nursery, said he had no objection to turning most of his records over to the commission, but that he refused positively to tell the physical condition of any of the wards in his care.

"Some things asked for are entirely improper," he said last night. "The letter came from the commission about a week ago and things are not settled yet, but I expect they will be soon. There is no disagreement, but we desire to meet with the commission regarding some of their demands before compliance."

"I cannot be required to make known the misfortune of some unfortunate girl. Of course, our objection chiefly concerns the girls at the Louise home and not so much the babies. The board has instructed me that if it is necessary to fill out the cards before the matter is taken up further to leave blank the lines provided for statement of physical condition. We have no objection to giving the rest of the information requested for the records."

Publicity Is Denied.

No statement could be secured yesterday from the child welfare commission as to its side of the case, as it was impossible to get in touch with Mr. Thomas. Mrs. Millie Trumbull admitted that numerous institutions have not yet complied with the request and said that unless this is done before the commission's next meeting on March 24 the matter will be given attention at that time.

She denied that information given the commission in confidence could be made public property and declared that all such records always have been regarded as secret.

SHINGLE MILL MAY START

EXPERIENCED MAN NEGOTIATING FOR PROPERTY.

Hundred Million Feet of Fine Second Growth Timber Awaiting Saw Near Brownsville.

BROWNVILLE, Or., March 13.—(Special.)—A deal is pending between the recently organized Brownsville chamber of commerce and George Loeb whereby this experienced sawmill man will put a large shingle mill in Brownsville. Mr. Loeb has obtained possession of a large quantity of standing cedar near the Calapooia river. He proposes that the chamber of commerce purchase the old woolen mill building at Brownsville for $3000 and he will pay interest on the money invested at 7 per cent until such time as he can buy the mill outright.

He promises to expand the mill to a box factory as well as a shingle mill and to install planers and other machinery. Three subscriptions of $500 each have been practically assured for the purchase of the building.

Charles Childs, who owns timber land in the section, says that there must be 100,000,000 feet of fine second-growth timber within a radius of six miles from Brownsville awaiting the saw.

Mr. Childs and his mother own 1440 acres of fine timber land on the county road about three miles northwest of Brownsville. The last sawmill that existed in this territory was the McDowell mill of about 40 years ago.

At present there are only three mills in the immediate vicinity of Brownsville—the Scott mill, the Loeb mill and the Stanwood mill. There are others, however, farther up the Calapooia.
