THE GENERAL MOTORS CO.

is probably the largest in the world. They build a dozen different touring cars because individual tastes vary; they build one make of truck because the business man wants the truck that will haul the most pounds the most miles for the least money. If one truck will haul cheaper than another, that truck is the one to buy regardless of first cost. We believe wo can show you figures taken from the records of Portland firms that will convince you that G. M. C. stands for the greatest economy in hauling. We are offering the following trucks with everything G. M. C. stands for, together with the backing of a house that has been growing constantly in the same line of business since the dawn of the motor truck era.
