

JUST REMEMBER THAT IT'S ALSO BLOSSOM TIME IN PORTLAND

Hood River Has Its Blossom Festival, and Salem, and Other Oregon Towns, but This Oldsmobile Eight Found Plenty of Blossoms Without Stirring Out of the City Limits

MANY motorists will drive today to Hood River to enjoy the spectacle of thousands of apple trees in full bloom. However, it isn't necessary to forego blossoms if you can't make the trip. Right here in Portland, big city as it now is, there are many trees in blossom if you know where to look. One of the best places is in the outer Hawthorne district, near the first slopes of Mount Tabor, where fruit trees are blooming profusely in the yards of many beautiful homes there. Arnold Cohen of the Oldsmobile Company of Oregon took an Oldsmobile Eight and a photographer into this district the other day, and these pictures are the result. The upper photo shows cherry blossoms at the Philip Buchner home, 1495 Hawthorne avenue. This is one of the handsome residences in that district of handsome residences. The lower photograph to the left shows the Oldsmobile in the driveway to Dr. J. C. Elliott King's residence, 227 East Sixtieth street. The picture to the right of it is a view up one of the streets of this section.
