Francisco Villa

FRANCISCO VILLA is reported as having been selected for chief constabulary for the City of Mexico. He is said to have grown more portly while leading revolts against the former government.

Interesting among the thousands who crowded the Chicago auditorium were Isiah T. Montgomery, 72, of Mount Bayou, Miss., who worked for Jefferson Davis during the civil war. George W. Gale of Greenville, Miss., United States senator from his state from 1877 to 1889 was another interesting figure among the delegates. He is the only survivor of the 26 delegates who voted for General U. S. Grant at the republican national convention at Chicago in 1860.

The "Resolute" was leading the "Vanitie" off New Haven, Conn., in the first trial race of the two boats to decide which shall race the "Shamrock" in the international cup race, when the towering mast and immense spread of canvass of the "Resolute" crashed into the sea. Two men were carried with it when the great mast snapped before a heavy gust of wind. The men were rescued.

Sydney Ernest Richardson is a London messenger boy, aged 14. He arrived at New York on the steamship Mongolia to bring a message from the lord mayor of London to the mayor of New York. The immigration officers ordered the youth to Ellis Island, as he is under the age of 16 and unaccompanied by parent or guardian.

At Princeton university large numbers of the students have adopted blue denim as their uniform for class rooms. J. W. Howell Jr., of Newark, N. J., and A. P. Hall of New York, are among the number.

It was a distinguished assemblage that witnessed the marriage of Lady Dorothy Cavendish, daughter of the duke of Devonshire, governor-general of Canada, to Captain Harold MacMillan, late of the Scots guards. The queen mother, Alexandra, Princess Victoria, Prince Albert and the duke of Connaught were present. The Rev. William Temple, a cousin of the bride, and Rev. John MacMillan, a cousin of the bridegroom, officiated.

Dmitri Merezhkewski, Russia's most renowned novelist of the present time, is coming to America to lecture against bolshevism. He can speak with an intimate knowledge of the topic, for he escaped from the forces of the bolshevik government at Petrograd and made an adventurous flight to Warsaw. He gained fame as author of "The Death of the Gods."

Paul Deschanel, president of France, suffered no great inconvenience from the fall from the window of his special train at which his countrymen laughed. It was an incident so out of the ordinary for the president of the republic to be left in his pajamas and to seek shelter in a track walker's shanty, that it appealed to the French sense of humor but there was rejoicing that it proved no more serious.

All immigrants who come from Holland do not wear wooden shoes. This was demonstrated when a group of children landed from a steamer at a New York pier. During a week 8275 immigrants landed, this group coming from Rotterdam.

Lax Rindako has invented a gun to save lives. It is a life-line hurling gun that shoots a line accurately for 1400 feet and has the highest commendation of the government steamboat inspection board. The powder used is enclosed in a waterproof cartridge, and is said never to miss fire and to have very little recoil.

Mrs. Amelia Fowler of Boston, a famous needlewoman, restored famous naval flags at Annapolis. She was given one of the Missouri battle flags of the civil war which she reconstructed.
