

LEGIONNAIRES LAUD EFFORTS OF LEADER

William B. Follett Not Desirous of Re-election.

SACRIFICES TOO GREAT

Post Commander Accomplishes Much in Behalf of Men Who Served Country.

When William B. Follett, department commander of the American Legion, steps out of office August 1, he will leave behind a record of accomplishment and earnest endeavor that will make the path of his successor a difficult one in comparison, in the opinion of many Oregon Legionnaires who have kept in touch with his work.

Mr. Follett will not be a candidate for re-election to the post of legion commander in Oregon. He has made it plain on my attention which I cannot ignore for another year," announced Mr. Follett. It is known that he virtually sacrificed his business as legion during 1919 and 1920, and the argument had weight.

Mr. Follett is not that my interest is not as sincere, and my heart with the American Legion as greatly as ever, but personal affairs are making a claim on my attention which I cannot ignore for another year," announced Mr. Follett. It is known that he virtually sacrificed his business as legion during 1919 and 1920, and the argument had weight.

Mr. Follett is also a national vice-commander of the American Legion, was one of the first Oregonians to take an intense interest in the formation of the organization of war veterans. He was one of the delegates to the first American caucus of ex-service men held in St. Louis in May, 1919, from Oregon, and was the only one incidentally, from this state outside of Portland, to be present from that time. Since, the necessity of being in more direct touch with legion affairs in the state caused him to move to Portland.

Returning to Oregon full of enthusiasm for the American Legion and the great work of the organization of ex-service men had pledged himself, Mr. Follett plunged into early organization work. His selection as first state commander at the initial convention of the American Legion in Portland last September was in recognition of his past work.

Though the first thought in the choice of Mr. Follett for the position was that of finding a man who was sincere and above the suspicion of seeking political preferment through the American Legion, "Bill" Follett was an excellent choice from another point of view. He put at rest, probably forever in Oregon, the groundless rumors that he was the organization that it was an officers' club, and chiefly composed of men who did not see service overseas.

Mr. Follett is a serious veteran and served throughout the war as an enlisted man. He was discharged with the grade of sergeant and with battery F, 69th coast artillery, incidentally, he is above draft age. One of the earliest activities of the first department commander of the legion in this state was to fight for better treatment of the boys in the shadow of the capitol. Mr. Follett went to Washington, D. C., and was with the body of legionnaires who secured the early passage of the Sweet bill in December, 1919, and gained many concessions for their wounded comrades. His trip was made entirely at his own expense, as was a later journey to the east for conference with national officers of the organization.

Mr. Follett has been extremely active in the American Legion's adjusted compensation bill fight. His efforts to secure the passage of a cash bonus for world-war veterans have been strenuous. One of the most active legionnaires to appear before the state legislature at its last session in favor of measures sponsored or approved by the American Legion was Mr. Follett. Though he would approve nothing which savored of politics, he was a strong advocate of legislation that favored Americanism.

25 HOUSE PERMITS GIVEN

Residence Building Unusually Active for This Time of Year.

Twenty-five permits for the constructing of private residences have been issued the last week by the bureau of building in the city hall. This is a good record for this time of the year, according to H. E. Plummer, building inspector. The average for the year has been 70 to 100 permits for residences a month.

Building will be more active in the fall, thinks Mr. Plummer, when Portlanders begin returning from vacations. Commissioner Barbur's emergency housing committee will meet early next month to make plans for helping everyone who wishes to build or who is having trouble under present housing conditions.

The plans for cheap three and four room houses which have been drawn up under the direction of the committee have been used a great deal and calls have come from outside the state. One request for the plans was received last week from Wyoming. The plans, together with estimates and the bill of material, are given to those interested for 25 cents. The plans include garden plots.

SCALES TO BE TESTED

Portland Residents to Be Assured of Full Weights and Measures.

Commissioner Mann will start an investigation at once to see that the residents of Portland get the proper weight in the food they buy and full measure of gasoline for their machines. Through the testing of weights and measures, a thorough rechecking will be made of all scales, gasoline pumps and weights and measures in general.

"With the cost of living so high, we must be sure that when a woman saves up enough money to buy a few pounds of bacon or meat she will get correct weight," Commissioner Mann said yesterday.

Ohio Moose Portland Guest

John J. Lentz, former representative in congress from Ohio, spent Saturday in Portland as the guest of Portland lodge, 391, Loyal Order of Moose. Mr. Lentz was in the city about two weeks ago, at which time a dinner was given in his honor and that of Professor Albert Bushnell Hart, of Harvard. Mr. Lentz left last night for his home at Canton, Ohio.

Y., great incooness of the great council of the United States, and H. Dorsey Etchison of the Maryland council will participate.

At the same time the Washington Red Men council and the Washington Degree of Pocahontas council will be in session in Vancouver, Wash. Tomorrow evening Oregon Red Men will visit Vancouver and take part in the parade in honor of the great incooness Rogers a banquet at the home which will be followed by the exemplification of one of the degrees of the order and an open meeting addressed by Mr. Rogers, followed by a reception and dance.

Tuesday evening the Oregon and Washington councils will tender Great Incooness Rogers a banquet at the Portland Chamber of Commerce, to be attended by members of the order, their families and friends. Speakers will include Mayor Baker, Representative C. N. McArthur, H. Dorsey Etchison of Maryland, Great Sachem E. B. King of Tacoma and Great Pocahontas Helen Wynn of Washington. Following the address of the great incooness Rogers a banquet at the newly appointed great chiefs of Oregon and Washington.

Sightseeing and other entertainment for the delegates are scheduled for Wednesday. In the evening special degree work will be conducted by Opontia tribe No. 2, in a special wigwam in the forest in Washington county. A parade of automobiles at the close of the year for the old Oregon and California railroad as a first step will precede the affair.

PIONEER ENGINEER DIES

FRANK CRAW, AGED 71 YEARS, FALLS FROM TREE.

Portland Man Spends 42 Years on Engine—Served Brotherhood as Secretary.

Destiny played one of its strange tricks Thursday when it brought to a close the life of Frank S. Craw, who had for years been employed as a fireman and engineer for railroads in this vicinity. After nearly half a century of this hazardous employment, without a single injury to himself or anyone else in connection with the operation of his trains, Craw retired some months ago, and on Thursday met his death as the result of a fall out of a tree in his own yard. He was engaged in trimming branches when he lost his footing and plunged several feet. He was rushed to a hospital, but died within a few hours.

The deceased was born in Portland, Conn., July 14, 1849, and came to Oregon in 1877. He began work in September of that year for the old Oregon & California railroad as a fireman.

65 BOYS AT SPIRIT LAKE

SELF-GOVERNING CAMP CONDUCTED BY Y. M. C. A.

Activities Promoted by J. C. Meahan Assisted by Corps of College Young Men.

More than 65 boys, together with ten leaders, are enjoying the summer at Spirit lake camp in the heart of the Cascade mountains. This site, which has been the location of the Y. M. C. A. boys' camp for 12 years, is just two and one-half miles north of Mount St. Helens, at an altitude of 3300 feet. To aid in the promotion of the camp activities, J. C. Meahan, the boys' work secretary of the Portland Y. M. C. A., has gathered around him a group of college men as assistants.

Many of them are prominent in college athletics and literary affairs. From the University of California are Harley Stevens, Ray Generaux and Howard Gray. From the University of Oregon, Remy Cox and Del Obersteifer. From Reed college, Hadron Rockey, and from the University of Washington, Paul Irvine.

The camp is run on a self-governing basis, with the laws and their execution entirely in the hands of the boys. At the present time the camp officers are as follows: Governor, Abbott Lawrence; Lieutenant-governor, Robert Warner; judge, Robert
