"Stop! Just a Minute, Please"

I must have a picture of this—it's too good to let go unadorned! And you stop, perhaps reluctantly, while she "snaps" the scene. "Click," it's all over, you start the engine, whizz away and the picture is forgotten in the midst of new wonders.

Nevertheless, some evening next January, when you are sitting by a roaring fire with nothing particular to do, your eye will catch the old kodak album that has told the story of many a summer's outing. You'll pick it up, glance it through casually, and presto! you are suddenly away up in the mountains, or walking by the ocean, living over again the glorious scenes of last summer.

What has happened? Why, the Kodak has made your vacation permanent—a thing that will live forever—by recording your visual impressions of it. To make it really permanent, bring all your work to
