

THREE HANO PARTY MACHINES IN ACTION

Interest Centers in Coming County Conventions.

ISSUES STILL IN DOUBT

Extravagant Claims Made but Not Seriously Taken—Non-Partisan League Real Factor.

BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 7.—(Special.)—The election machinery of three political organizations in Idaho has been put into working order with the Tuesday primary elections of the republican and democratic parties and the state convention of the non-partisan league the day following.

Some amusing, if not extravagant, claims are being made by the republican candidates for high office. The democrats had no contests, so they do not enter into the discussion. While delegates were elected to the democratic county conventions with no contests, it is but a matter of form to elect delegates to the state convention.

No one in Idaho who has observed the trend of political events is in a position to say just what holds the balance of power or what republican candidates lead for the various state offices. The aspirants for senator—Frank R. Gooding, L. V. Patch, E. G. Davis, A. H. Connor, Miles Cannon and C. W. Beale—all have their friends and all will have delegates in the coming county and state conventions, but none of them will have sufficient delegates to control.

The same situation is true with regard to the candidates for governor. D. W. Davis, present governor; John W. Ferguson, present state treasurer, and M. J. Kiger, speaker of the house of representatives. The balance of control in the state convention will be in the hands of the uninitiated delegates, and a majority will go there uninitiated.

The entire situation is likely to crystallize itself into this: These delegates will insist on naming the strongest congressional and state ticket possible, irrespective of the several and sundry candidates in the running, and if some or all of the candidates in the race at present are not found to be satisfactory or considered to have winning qualifications they will be substituted.

It is more than likely that combinations between candidates for nominations—congressional and state—will have a controlling influence on some of the county elections coming up. There may be last moment retirements and other changes as startling.

The republican ticket is still in the making. The non-partisan ticket first, which for the last few years has been a thorn in the side of the two old parties, is the first to get a state ticket into the running. Had the league petitioned two weeks ago for a state ticket primary, it could have participated in the primary of last Tuesday, but evidently its leaders thought this was not advisable, so they took no action.

H. F. Samuels, whom the league selected to run for state senator, was its candidate for governor two years ago and was defeated. He formerly was a member of the state executive committee of the republican party. S. D. Fairchild, named as the state standard-bearer and candidate for governor, is a rancher and landowner of Kuna in Ada county. In a statement accepting the nomination he made a characteristic expression when he said:

"I hold in my hand the platform of the non-partisan league. For the next 90 days it will be my business if you elect me the next two years of my life will be spent in carrying out its doctrine. Within the next few weeks the other two parties will be placing their candidates on the ballot. I do not intend to attack these men. I am not going to lend myself to slander, but I am going to preach the platform which we have adopted. If the other candidates see fit to call me a liar I hope they do it at a place and time when they can look me in the eye, and if after they have said it they do not smile, then I will start something."

Fairchild is a giant in stature, weighing 250 pounds. Obituary. Mrs. Mary Miller, a pioneer of 1845, widow of the late William Miller of Salem, died August 5 at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Rome Goley, at Brookside. Three children survive her, Mrs. Kate Worden and Mrs.

E. E. Corpe of Brooks, and Mrs. Walter Alford of Klamath Falls. Two sisters, Mrs. A. J. Howell of Hollywood, Cal., and Mrs. Lucy Stratton of Portland, are living.

BAKER, Or., Aug. 7.—(Special.)—Following an illness of three months, Mary S. Gardner, mother of Mrs. J. W. Stuchell of Baker, died at the home of her daughter, 1321 Dewey avenue, on Thursday. Mrs. Gardner was born in Cambridgehire, England, in 1843. When 8 years old she came with her parents to America, settling in Illinois. She came to Baker 15 years ago to live with her daughter.

PENDLETON, Or., Aug. 7.—(Special.)—Mrs. Rachael Reynolds, buried Thursday at Pilot Rock, was a pioneer of 1853 and lived at Pilot Rock 29 years. Rachael Weston was born in Indianapolis. She married J. S. Smith at The Dalles and to them two daughters were born, Mary and Martha, both living. Mr. Smith enlisted for the civil war in 1861 and at its close was reported missing. Mrs. Smith married J. W. Ogg at Champagne, Or. To them six children were born: Jefferson, Albert, William, Jack, Anna and Belle. Mr. Ogg died in 1878. In 1880 Mrs. Ogg married J. L. Reynolds.

PENDLETON, Or., Aug. 7.—(Special.)—W. S. Boynton, 59, a resident of Umatilla county since 1881, was taken ill at his home in Hermiston a week ago Sunday and died Friday. He was a contractor and had lived in Hermiston 14 years. Besides his widow, five sons and two daughters, he leaves two brothers and two sisters: F. V. Boynton of Pendleton, H. E. Boynton of Sunnyside, Wash.; Mrs. William McReynolds of Seattle and Mrs. J. H. Shoemaker of Hood River.

Thomas Joseph Hannigan, for 40 years in service of the Western Pacific as locomotive engineer, passed away August 3 after a serious illness of five months. He became ill while on a trip from San Francisco to Portland, his family having moved to the former place four years ago. Mr. Hannigan was retired in 1908 after running on the line between this city and Ashland. He was born in Maine and moved to Portland over 50 years ago. The engineer is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Lela Holme and Gertrude Hannigan, also one grandchild, Thomas Joseph Robse and a brother, Edward F. Hannigan of Providence, R. I.

GAILEY GIRL MARCHIONESS

FORMER MUSICAL COMEDY STAR IS ELEVATED.

Pretty Daughter of London Miller Wed Viscount Drumlaug in 1917.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—One of the famous "Gaiety Girls," a former star from the Gaiety theater, the home of London musical comedy, becomes the marchioness of Queensberry through the death of the late Marquis of Queensberry at Johannesburg yesterday. She was formerly Irene Richards, the pretty daughter of a London miller who, in 1917, married Viscount Drumlaug, now the new marquis. Besides her good looks, the new marchioness, who studied singing under Jean de Heaske, developed a good stage voice and became a star at the age of 18.

The present marquis was 21 in 1917, when he was married, and was serving as a lieutenant in the Scottish Black Watch regiment. He was severely wounded at the front six weeks after the wedding. The new marquis and marchioness are now on tour in South America. They have one daughter, just over a year old.

The name of the marquis of Queensberry is always associated in the minds of the British with the father of the late marquis, the famous sportsman who framed the self-named boxing rules, and the succeeding holders of the title have always taken a keen interest in sports. The ninth marquis of Queensberry was born October 13, 1868, succeeding to the title upon the death of his father in 1900.

He had a varied and picturesque career, which carried him over most of the world in search of wealth. During most of his life he was poor in money, although rich in family dignity and honors. At one time or another he was a midshipman in the navy, a cowboy and journalist in America, a gold miner in Australia and a plantation foreman in Ceylon. He made money in the Australian mines but eventually lost it on the stock exchange, although several times he amassed considerable riches.

The marquis' first wife, Anna Maria Walters, whom he married in 1893, died in 1917. A year later he married Mary Louise, the widow of Ernest Morgan, a prominent member and head of a Cardiff firm of poultry and game dealers. The late marquis was a brother-in-law of Lord Douglas, who in May of this year obtained a divorce from his wife, the actress, Loreta Audis. Money of California, in London. Their marriage took place in San Jose in 1895.

OIL RISE TO BE PROBED

INCREASE IN GASOLINE BELIEVED UNWARRANTED. State Treasurer Says Firms Were Allowed to Reduce Quality but Not Add to Price.

SALEM, Or., Aug. 7.—(Special.)—O. P. Hoff, state treasurer and state scaler of weights and measures, let it be known today that he will investigate the recent increase in the price of gasoline.

Several months ago when the shortage of gasoline became apparent, prosecutions under the 6 per cent specific gravity law were suspended so that gasoline might be available for the essential industries of Oregon, the understanding being that the distributors would reduce the price 1 1/2 cents a gallon if they were permitted to sell the same grade of fuel as sold in Washington.

The quality has been reduced, it is said, but the price has continued to advance. "The increased price demanded is apparently so much greater than the increased cost of production, transportation, etc.," said Mr. Hoff, "that it appears an attempt is being made to take advantage of a critical situation. This, in my opinion, is unwarranted, and a violation of the understanding of the oil companies and is reacting unfavorably to the state of Oregon industrially and commercially. The original understanding as to quality to be furnished and price to be charged was made only after the shortage, seriously threatened the moving of crops and the continuance of operation of industries depending on the output of the oil companies."

DISHES OBJECTED TO Husband Says Wife Made Practice of Abusing Him. Robert Green objected to his wife's habit of throwing dishes at him, he states in his complaint for a decree of divorce filed yesterday in the Multnomah county circuit court against his wife, Hazel Green.

In addition he charges that his wife applied insulting names to him, was overbearing and refused to live with him. They were married August 29, 1918. The other suit for divorce filed yesterday was that of George A. McCullution against Cora McCullution, charging desertion.
