Preparations for Defense of City Against Bolsheviki Related

Preparations for the Polish defense of Warsaw, the bolshevik cry of "capture or kill," and the atmosphere "capture or kill." and the atmosphere of the then impending battle of Warsaw were graphically described in the letter of a Portland girl, received here yesterday. Miss Jessie Ray Nottingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Nottingham, 1575 Hawthorne avenue, is the writer of the letter. Miss Nottingham was stationed with the Junior Red Cross in Warsaw, until recently, but a cablegram now until recently, but a cablegram now announces her "safe in Paris." During the last few days of July

During the last few days of July she wrote:

"The papers this morning announced the bolsheviki were crying "on to Warsaw." and that the government at Moscow had stated there would be no peace until Warsaw was taken. The Poles are rallying for the life struggle. Big letters in red paint stretched across the sidewalks, several signs to the block, call for volunteers. Handbills are circulated saying "Do not expect peace. Do not expect help from the outside. This war must be won from within. Come forth with your life, your money, your all."

Loss of Vilna Reported.

Loss of Vilna Reported.
"A week go Friday Vilna was evacuated and the Americans from there have come to Warsaw. Several are my friends. They had been forced to ride on top a train for 24 hours, hanging on at times for their life. A number of the American men are sport in the danger zone, but the women ure. are kept back at a safe distance."

Indian warfare typical of the northwest was waged by the Poles and bol-sheviki, said Miss Nottingham, in quoting Charles Phillips, the drama-ist, who was at Kief during the Polish occupation and subsequent Sniping from behind trees and rock ridges; the defense of water holes as vivid as a Remington paint-ing, and small contingents here and there making their last stand, are remindful of our Indian wars."

Cruelty by the Lenine-Trotzky forces was reported by Miss Nottingham in this statement:

Poles' Eyes Put Out. "One of my friends is taking care of two Poles in the hospital who had their eyes put out and large quantities of skin stripped from their bodies. These poor chaps said it would have been so much easier to have been killed outright, but they were courageously trying to get well, as mutilated as they are.

"'We may light out any minute now,' she added, as the statement of the American Red Cross chief in charge of the Warsaw party."

The handicaps under which Red Gross workers live was typified in this experience: "My baggage is still at the Bialystok orphanage and has not been sent down, although I ordered it 11 days ago. By the time you get this letter you will know whether or not we were right in thinking Bialystok and Warsaw witch have been been and the state of Warsaw might have to be evacuated War Experiences Related. Scotty,' the rest of my Junior Red Scotty, the rest of my Junior Red Cross family, are in Crestochowa. Although it is very near the western border, I wish they would come back to Warsaw. They and a Y. M. C. A. man are the only Americans in the town. If anything does happen the larger units would be safe."

The war experiences of an American-Russian family was detailed by Miss Nottingham.

Miss Nottingham.

"Early in 1914 this family—father, mother and seven children—left the States for a visit. War came on and they were separated by the advance of armies. All except three children have been killed, and we are taking care of these children now."

Only the chiefs and those in active service are permitted to remain behind when the city is be-sieged and Miss Nottingham was among those ordered away. Scene of Robinson Crusoe Shipwreck 6000 Miles Across.

HONOLULU, T. H., Aug. 21.- If Robinson Crusoe had lived during the cretaceous period of geologic times, the scene of his shipwreck would have been a continent 5000 miles across, instead of the little island of Juan Fernandez, according to evidence presented to the Pan-Pacific congress, in session here August 2 to 20, by Professor W. A. Bryan, scientist of the University of Hawaii.

Professor Bryan, who has just re-turned from a scientific expedition to the mainland and islands of the south declared he brought back facts tending to show that at some time (probably during the cretaceous pe-riod), there existed a land connec-tion from Juan Fernandez north 6000 miles to the Hawaiian islands.

EASTERN VISITOR INSTRUCTS CHILD IN INDIAN LORE OF OLD OPERA HOUSE PASSES

ALBANY STRUCTURE WILL BE RAZED FOR LUMBER.

More Modern Playhouses Supplant Building That Played Part in Life of City.

ALBANY, Or., Aug. 21 .- (Special)-The old Albany opera house, where nany big shows have been staged, public meetings held and entertainnents of various kinds enjoyed and which played a part in the life of Albany for years, is to be razed. More modern playhouses in the heart of the business district have supplanted it and since the big structure has passed its period of usefulness it is to be dismantled and the lumber in it used o build dwellings or an apartment

In the days preceding the last derade there was one big "opera house" in the average valley city of this size. Albany's original opera house stood at Second and Ferry streets. After it burned this structure, which was a very large one for the city in those dars and is a big building viewed from the standards of today, was built on East First street between Baker and Montgomery streets. For many years every show of any con sequence in Alban appeared there.

Then the motion picture came and smaller theaters were established in the center of the business district in locations more accessible. These developed into larger and larger play-houses, first accommodating vaude-ville and then the road shows. About he same time the new armory sup-danted the old opera house as a arge and centrally located place for big public meetings and the old struc-ure, somewhat outside the center of business activity, "lost out."
