

PERSHING'S BATTLE MAP IS AN EXHIBIT

Situation at Armistice Hour Shown for All Armies.

RELIC IS IN MUSEUM

Congress Probably Will Be Asked to Provide Building for War Collection.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(By the Associated Press.)—One of the most interesting exhibits of the thousands in the world war collection now being gathered at the National museum is the "order of battle" map used by General Pershing in directing the movements of the American forces in France. The wall map, 8x10 feet in size, together with the walls, floor and furniture of the room in which it hung at American headquarters at Chaumont, was transferred to the museum by the war department at the request of the general.

The map shows in a vivid fashion the exact situation at the hour the armistice was signed with reference to the strength and location of all divisions, both enemy and allied, on the western front, the correct battle line, the names and locations of commanding officers and locations of headquarters and army boundaries. There also is a considerable amount of detailed information regarding the American divisions, as for instance the percentages of fresh and tired troops and the length of time the various units had been in the line or in reserve.

The war collection has already assumed such proportions as to make necessary some new arrangement for housing it. Many of the exhibits are now crowded into the ground floor of the new National Museum building while others are in the old building and a few of the artillery pieces are in the open air awaiting the construction of suitable shelter. William Ravelin, the director of the museum, says congress probably will be asked at the next session to provide a building for the collection, which is of great historical value.

Airplanes From Exhibit.
The airplane exhibit includes all types of American and French planes used extensively in combat, pursuit and bombing work abroad and several specimens of captured enemy machines. There are also on exhibition many types of airplane motors, in addition to the various types of section of the museum contains the original Langley and Wright models.

The collection of American army medical equipment, furnished by the war department, is practically complete and includes the various types of operating and X-ray equipment used in base hospitals and field advanced base stations, a large variety of surgical instruments, ambulances and military dental equipment.

Section Devoted to Gas Mask.
One entire section of the collection is devoted to exhibits showing the inception and development of the gas mask. Other exhibits include the great 80-inch searchlights used in the field, the field artillery, machine gun and rifles of the uniforms, field equipment and medals of general officers, subordinate officers and privates of all the allied countries and Germany and Austria. There also is a collection of articles manufactured entirely of paper by the Germans. These include paper twine, paper cloth, feed bags, artillery packs, water buckets, blankets, kit bags, saddle bags, canteen covers and tin snappers.

Many other exhibits are being received daily from the army and navy and the director hopes to make the collection the most complete world war museum in existence.

Lovers of the Highest Type of Chinese Oriental Rugs
—will be glad to know that we are in receipt from our buyer in China of an unusually desirable importation. The designs are symbolic and the color combination in blue, tan and gold are characteristic. Do not fail to see them.
