The appointments are the result of a movement started during the last meeting of the Oregon Synod and came through the joint action of that body with the Presbyterian board of education and the session of the central church.

Previous to the installation of Mr. Giffen at Eugene, a survey of the student body had been made by the various communions of the city, lookspecial worker by each communion. This survey shows a large proportion of the students associated with varpressing preference for the Presbyterian church being more than 300. campus.

Following out the plans of the churches and the Synodical committee Mr. Giffen will devote himself to personal work with the students on the campus, and this will be supplemented by the teaching of a University Bible class at Central church. It being the hope that here may be brought about a closer bond of fellowship and co-operation between students and faculty and Central church. In addition to his work in the student body. Mr. Giffen will supply the pulpit of the Fairmount church Sunday mornings and will frequently be heard at the vesper services in Central church. Later in the year he will take charge of religious literature at the University. He enters upon the work realizing that while it is an exacting field it is one of great possibilities.
