RETAILER AND PUBLIC HOLD
KEY TO LOWER PRICES, SAYS
NEW YORK PAPER

—Alright, Let's Go!

The New York Tribune is authority for the statement that wholesale prices "have reached the lowest possible level for the season and have been sufficiently stabilized to create confidence among buyers," and that "the retailer and the Public hold the key to trade improvement."

In other words, it's a fifty-fifty proposition. Prices and quality must be such as to attract customers and give satisfaction, while the Public MUST be willing to buy on those terms.

* * * * *

Here, then, is another example of our willingness to do our part to lower the hurtful prices that are retarding a return to a proper peace basis. We are offering an exceptional new purchase of that represent the very cream of the country's manufacturing quality at the greatly reduced prices

SUITS-COATS-RAINCOATS

$30 — $35 — $40

These prices are far below those necessarily charged at the ordinary kind of store, and, in conjunction with our well-known upstairs saving of $10 on each garment, offer you values that have no equal since previous to the war.

Don't fail to see our windows. They tell the story.
