"The Trimming of the Tree," a Christmas interlude, by Sanders Alexander Reed, will be given by the Y. W. C. A. in co-operation with the Portland Drama league at the Heilig theater on December 22. The play is to be given for the benefit of the Girls' club work of the Y. W. C. A. The interlude is developed in the manner and form of the Elizabethan period, but will be staged in the cabin of an Oregon pioneer of 1853, with the properties and figures of the play historically correct and very human. Into this scene will enter the Christmas fairies, the moralities of love, patience and industry, the spirits from old books and the flowers and fruits of Oregon, who are the spirits of good cheer. A domestic problem involving real drama, comic pantomime, a sense of the mysterious and miraculous, interlarded with the true
