"Valentine's Valentine"

A Play in Three Acts
By the Author of "The Secret of Popularity"

Act I—Mr. Jameson's rooms, about 5 P. M.
Act II—The Vance parlor, about 5:30 P. M.
Act III—The Vance parlor, about 9 P. M.

Act I.

The curtain rises and Mr. James Jameson is seen pacing the floor of his room impatiently. "Jimmy" is very much in love with a certain young lady, but is entirely too timid to tell her so. However, a beautiful valentine is now on its way to her with "To My Valentine" written across one corner in his own handwriting. Jimmy is rather forgetful and he has just remembered that her first name is Valentine. What can he do—how can he explain? Well, no matter, the gift is now on its way. The curtain falls.

Act II.

The act opens with Miss Valentine Vance reading in her parlor. She is worried, for she knows Jimmy loves her, but he never proposes. Something always happens whenever he has a chance, and then his everlasting timidity keeps other chances from arriving. It is a difficult position. Just then the maid brings her a package, and upon opening it, she fairly shouts with joy, "To My Valentine—and from Jimmy. I knew it was coming sometime, but I didn't expect it now." Curtain.

Act III.

Curtain! Our unsuspecting Jimmy has just entered the parlor and a carefully thought out explanation is about to fall from his lips, when Valentine rushes forward to greet him. "Oh, Jimmy, I knew it would happen, and I'm so glad to be your Valentine!" Thus they became engaged and the delighted Jimmy exclaims, "What a little stroke of Fate has made me the happiest man in the world! I'm so glad they named you Valentine, dear, and I certainly suggest to every timid young man in love, an early visit to that gorgeous display of valentines on the second floor of
