

By Joseph MacQueen.

Russia in the Shadows, by H. G. Wells. George H. Doran Co., New York City.

In "Russia in the Shadows," Mr. Wells writes graphically as a descriptive reporter, and presents facts as to Russia under soviet rule, in wreck and disorder.

Mr. Wells finds the soviet government of Russia childish and visionary, but more energetic and creative.

There are perhaps half a dozen shops still open in Petersburg.

The electric street cars are still running, but only on the tramway.

The Sand Digger, by Arnold Mulder. Houghton, Mifflin Co., Boston.

A powerfully constructed, sane American novel, picturing people living on the edge of the world.

The characters in the novel are artist and reflect Dr. Brier Quentin, his far-flung medical practice.

The Mad Man, by Charles Hanson Towne. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York City.

Based on the play of that name by Porter Emerson Brown, this novel of wild days and wild men in Arizona.

their country home not far from London, in which city Mr. Walgrove was engaged in business.

On her way to the Walgrove house Cynthia's conveyance became upset and she was obliged to get out.

Then Dr. Lanfair finds that he loves Ellen, and she loves him.

There is no established conclusion in Mr. Wells' book that the present soviet government of Russia soon will collapse.

PASTOR WARNS THAT THERE IS DAY WHEN ALL FACE RECORD AT HEAVENLY THRONE

What Are You Saying to Your God Now? What Will Rev. C. H. Huett of Rose City Park Methodist-Episcopal Church; Ask You to Say to Him Then?

BY REV. C. W. HUETT, Rose City Park M. E. Church.

today, despite the very evident fact of our great and substantial progress, could be made to believe that sufficient revenue could be raised by voluntary gifts to maintain the state, or that a sufficiently large number of men could be obtained by this method of voluntary service to man justify, or that parents and children together would give careful attention enough to daily school attendance to keep ignorance from being a menace to our life and institutions without conscription.

Not only is this idea common in the life of everyday affairs, but also it is very familiar in religion. When God in past ages could find no people of sufficiently trustworthy character to make the religious teachers of men, he laid hold upon a man of Mesopotamia, by name Abram, took him away from the life and people he knew and started him out to found a new nation, fitted him for that time the religious teachers of the world.

Some years ago it was my privilege to spend a week in Palestine, and while there a trip was made to the Dead sea, Jericho and the Jordan river.

In the New Testament the idea is everywhere. Joseph is betrothed to a beautiful young woman when grave complications arise and he is minded to put her away privately.
