Preliminary Move Made for Coal Agreement.

COMMISSION IS TO ACT

Miners, Operators and Public to Be Represented on Body-Acceptance Voted by Unions.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 21.—(Special)—The end of the state-wide coal miners' strike is in view. The pre-liminary movement for settlement of the walkout that has tied up the mines ing After Raid on Vessel.

This commission, which was, proposed by Director Clifford of the state department of labor and which had been accepted by both the operators and miners, is to consist of five members—two representing the miners, could not be found. It was believed two representing the operators and the fifth to be appointed by Clifford.

Special Survey Planned. The commission is empowered to make a survey of the general situation, investigate costs of production, costs of living, wages and all other angles of the question. Recommends tions of the commission will be submitted to both miners and operators for ratification.

Clifford declared today that he had appointed J. H. Alport, a mining engineer of Barnesboro, Pa., as the fifth member of the commission and that Alport had already telegraphed his eceptance, starting immediately for

Alport is no stranger to Seattle, as he was a member of the commission that investigated the coal situation last year in the northwest following

Clifford has also recommended to the operators and miners the appointment of the same representatives who worked with Alport on the commission of a year ago. These were Erustest Newham, district secretary of the miners; Robert Harlan, district expresident; D. F. Buckingham, general manager of the Roslyn Fuel company, and N. D. Moore, vice-president of the Pacific Coast Coal company.

President Short of the Washington State Federation of Labor, speaking before the convention of miners, recommended the adoption of the Clifford plan, but the final vote on the proposition was not taken until late in the Wage Cut Demand Dropped.

The mill of the West Oregon Lumber company at Linnton closed down yesterday because of the high water. The Peninsula mill, one of the few remaining in operation along the Willamette and Columbia rivers, will be forced to suspend operations if the flood reaches a height of 23 feet.

Fair Weather Forecast. The silver lining to the dark cloud of industrial inconvenience of high water lies in the fact that the placid, if elevated, waters of the Willamette will be enjoyed today by hundreds today with westerly winds. The lagoon within Ross island, which exists only at high water, and is penetrable to boats only at still higher water, is now open. Lush meadow grass and spring flowers wave under water while the canosist passes over them and stirs them with his paddle. A few hours of sunshine will take the chill from the water of the shallow lagoon and the spot is a favorite with small boys eager for the first swim of the season.

According to old residents and denizens of the waterfront, conditions are now almost identical to those of 1834, the great flood year. According to Hugh Brady, city grappler, the river reached a 20-foot stage in the latter part of May, 1894, and then went over the top in June.

That higher water than that now prevailing is to be expected is borne out by the fact that in the late 20.

out by the fact that in the last 20 years only four times has the crest of the summer freshet been reached in May. In only one of these years-1904 -did the river go as high as it is
