Big Herman Pillette, the youngster just peddied to Detroit, tossed a eweet game, and although the Braves outhit the Mackmen by a large margin Herm was the master in the pinches. Loose work on the defense caused the downfall of the locais, a balk by Bob Geary with a man on third and a wild pitch by Dalley under the same circumstances gave the Beavers two of their six tallies.

Fortland had a 5-to-1 lead at one stage of the loust, but the tribe battled their way to a tie score. Bill Stumpf was the lad who did it, his long double in the eighth scoring two runners and tieing the count. But Marty Krug rapped a three-bagger to left center in the ninth and Dailey wild-pitched the winning run across. Tomorrow the two clubs will play the usual Sunday double-header, beginning at 2:30, with another double bill carded for Monday. The score:

Storm Cloud Rising Over Summer Baseball.

COLLEGE BOARDS SCORED

committees Charged With Being Lax in Enforcing Rules Relating to Standings.

BY WALTER CAMP. (Copyright, 1921, by The Oregonian, NEW YORK, July 2.—(Special,

NEW YORK. July 2.—(Special.—
The old storm cloud of amateur standing as involved in summer baseball is rising above the college horizon once more. There are charges made that collegiate athiotic boards of control or committees have been lax of late in enforcing rules relating to the amateur standing of their men.

Some writers have gone so far as to say that the college ballplayer who has not taken money for exercising his talent is a rare bird. Whether these charges are true or not, the impression prevails generally that many of the men who have just finished college sessions will be helping out the old exchequer this summer, that they have done it in the past and that they still may be seen on college diamonds another year.

Rules Bar Participation.

Rules Bar Participation.

If this proves to be the case, then college committees are grievously at fault, for the present rules provide that a man may not in any way, directly or indirectly, receive money for the display of his athletic ability and still remain eligible for college athletic competition.

Of late years the temptations to college haliplayers have been strong. To summer hotels and semi-professional organizations a good college player is a valuable asset. It is probably true that many have succumbed. One element to be counted with is the Rules Bar Participation.

One element to be counted with is the One element to be counted with is the pride of the average youth in his athletic ability, which makes it really a compliment for him to be offered money for the skill he has acquired. Many a boy has been led into professionalism not because he needed the money, but because he was pleased over the fact that somebody was willing to pay him for his wares.

Money Question Argued.

There are scores of specious arguments for permitting a boy to exercise his talents and receive pay therefor. It is argued that if men receive money for ability in other than athletic directions without loss of amateur standing, it is reasonable for those whose ability lies in athletic lines to receive pay for these. This argument loses sight of the fact that whatever a man receives money for doing makes him a professional in that line. If he receives money for athletics he becomes a professional athlete, just as he becomes a professional actor if he receives compensation for acting.

The question also has been argued under cover in the east recently. There is no question but that queer compilications would ensue if such a rule were put through, especially if money-taking college athletes attempted to enter Amateur Athletic union contests. For there is no definition for a money-taking amateur in any of the various associations, athletics, tennis, golf or rowing.
