VISALIA. Cal., Aug. 13.—The fire in the Kings river district of the Sequola national forest definitely was con-trolled this afternoon after burning about 12 square miles of brush and limber country, according to a tele-phone message from General Grant national park, which has been used as a base by the men, who for a week have been fighting the flames. At times 500 men were engaged.

Although the fire is said to have been one of the worst in the history of the Sequoia forest, no person was

The value of the package could not have been more than $75 at the most. In fact, it was so valued by the shipper. The contents were such that they could have been procured easily in any town or city of moderate size, and why Brumfield should have and why Brumfield should have even concerned himself with such things, could not be savisfactorily explained by the officers today.

Ever since the filing of the formal murder charge against Mahoney new witnesses have been cropping up in the case, and it is expected that this will necessitate either the filing of a new complaint or the addition of a new complaint or the addition of a fresh list of witnesses.

Viskovich told the police.

The victim denied he had drawn it from the bank, alternative the filing of the formal murder charge against Mahoney new witnesses have been cropping up in the case, and it is expected that this will necessitate either the filing of a new complaint or the addition of a new complaint or the addition of a fresh list of witnesses.

things, could not be satisfactorily explained by the officers today.

On the surface it appear I that there must be a woman connected with the case. This theory was further strengthened by the fact that the pink silk skirt found in the box was purchased by a woman. There has been free intimation that there possibly was a woman connected with the case, but the officers have declared that they have no direct evidence as to whom she could be or what motive she could have in the case.

However, this theory was being followed by officers, who began searching for the woman who purchased the pink skirt. This skirt was first examined by Dr. Brumfield, It was too small for his wife, the clerk at Bursmall for his wife, the clerk at Burchard's Square store, where he nearly always trades, informed him, and consequently he left it. On the following day, the day of the murder, a young said to have ordered, as he covered woman appeared in the store and examined the skirt. She was meagerly described as being short dark and described as described a

The same is true in regard to the other contents of the box. Two khaki blouses, a pair of khaki trousers, a plink silk shirt, a pink silk combination suit. two pink camisoles and an old worn black sateen skirt, the latter having been discarded by Mrs. Burchard several months previously, comprised the wearing apparel in the box. In addition there was much accuratisted "litter" from the store, including a large number of old paper patterns, about four years old, two spools of damaged darning cotton, some books and other articles. There was nothing of value and the most expensive garment sold for not more than $10.

This box and its contents was taken

This box and its contents was taken to Myrtle Creek and there Dr. Brumitied requested the clerk to ship it to Mrs. Norman Whitney at Banff, Canada. This gave the officers the first clew as to the destination of the fugitive and formed him that the office could not accept packages consigned to Canada and the destination was changed to Seattle. In giving his story to the officers the agent was unable to remember the name of the Canadian town except that it ended with two "Ca" The officers pored over several maps before they were able to decide on Banff and then at once sent out cards carrying descriptions of the dentist to all points in that vicinity.

After ascertaining the contents of the box, they believed it to be only a blind, and they maintained that belief until the doctor sent the letter to the Seattle office of the company asking that the box be forwarded to him. Why he should have done this has completely baffled the officers. Sheriff Sturmer and Deputies Webb and Hopkins have left for Calgary to bring Brumfleld back to Roseburg. It is expected that it will take at least a week to get him back to this city, and during that time he will be under extremely close guard. It has been intimated that he will be smuggled into Roseburg under guard, for fear of violence from some of the friends of Dennis Russell, although it is not generally thought violence it is not generally thought violence

Mrs. Brumfield fought against the truth until the last possible minute, and when finally defeated in her claims continued to express her love and confidence in a message dispatched to her prisoner-husband. Brumfield, shaking from head to foot with sheer nervous fright, signed his name with a hand that trembled so that he could acarcely trace the words, and said:

"There's no use bucking you fellows. I would have to go back anyway and I might as well go peaceably."

As near as he was to a complete collapse. Brumfield steadfastly refused to discuss the crime with which he is charged. Persistent questioning by the police and by newspaper men falled to move him in his decision not to talk until he can pour his own tale into the ears of District Attorney Neuner of Douglas county, Oregon, who he has declared is a personal friend of his of long standing.

ROSEBURG, Or., Aug. 13.—(Special)—The officers and friends and acquaintances of Dr. Brumfield are completely baffled by the mystery which surrounds the package, the desire for possession of which proved to be the undoing of the alleged murder of Dennis Russell. Why should Dr. Brumfield be so attracted to a practically worthless package the contents of which could have been easily duplicated any place, is a mystery on which doubtless hinges the motive for the murder of Dennis Russell.

The value of the package could not have been more than $75 at the most. In fact, it was so valued by the ship.
