WOMEN TEACHERS TALK

PAN-PACIFIC CONFERENCE
HEARS FEMININE EDUCATORS.

World Progress Not to Be Bought
About by Radicals, Says One of Day's Speakers.

HONOLULU, Aug. 20.—Women speakers took up most of the session of the pan-Pacific educational conference here today. "We must become educators for peace," Miss Nina Buchanan, Seattle, Wash., president of the National League of Teachers' associations, told the conference. "The world progress will not be brought about by advanced thinkers, called by the much-abused name 'radicals.' We must be so schooled in the ways of peace that the war god will be buried from the throne, where he has been so long hated, although worshipped."

She outlined the aims of the associated teachers. "In every schoolroom a well-qualified, well-paid, professional teacher may seem selfish, but in the larger sense it is altruistic."

Iva Christiane Iverson, president of the Los Angeles Teachers' association, declared "nobody need fear class consciousness among teachers."

She declared that "this is no time for class agitation among teachers."

The welfare of teachers' parents and students alike can be promoted through raising the standard of home life, Mrs. Albert Rowell of Berkeley, Cal., declared in presenting the object of the national congress of mothers.

Caroline Frear Burk of San Francisco, speaking of the work of the Association of University Women, said the movement was international and 15 nations sent representatives to the meeting in London in 1920.

Maud May Babcock, professor of public speaking in the University of Utah, gave an account of her address in that state, and Florence Stevenson, Asheville, N. C., representing the women's board of home missions of the Presbyterian church, outlined the educational aspirations of the home missionary movement.

The missionary is the greatest influence for peace, the Rev. T. H. Haden, dean of the theological department of a Kobe university, told the conference, and emphasized the usefulness of mission schools.

"Four educators raise the ideals of all countries," Francisco Brito, consul-general for Portugal, said in addressing the conference. Japan is not narrow, Mr. Brito declared, but gives the opportunity the Japanese will obtain education and Christian atmosphere.

POLAR BEAR HITS DECK

HOODOO SHIP RAMS ICEBERG
AND DROPS ARCTIC BRUIN.

Animal Dives Overboard, While Negro Fireman Blanches With Fright in Mad Getaway.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(Special.)—When a ship hits an iceberg, wakes up a polar bear and dislodges him from his cozy bed, so that he strikes the deck with an angry "woof" and then dives overboard without even staying to breakfast—that is what happened to the Charlot today.

It was on the morning of June 2, about 6 o'clock, that the real war-torn ship in mishaps all her active days.

It was on the morning of June 2, about 6 o'clock, that the real war-torn ship in mishaps all her active days.

The ship was sailing at a reduced speed, with a heavy fog all about, and John J. Clinch, first officer, on watch, when suddenly only about 60 feet ahead loomed a vast and terrifying bulk. Clinch and Captain Ricca, who also was on the bridge, rang for full speed astern and did everything else that could be done to avert a collision, but the ship slipped along and brought up with a bang against the largest iceberg anyone aboard ever had seen.

The ship hit just under an overhang that was something like a balcony, and the whole thing, weighing about 100 tons, crashed down on deck.

With the ice came the polar bear, William Jackson, who was aboard as a fireman, but who at this moment was loling on deck just like a tourist, never will be as black again as he was before the bear hit the deck at his feet. William was spry and did the 50 yards back to his quarters in nothing flat, not even noting that the bear was as scared as he and had dived over the rail.

The third mate, Thomas T. McWade of Philadelphia, who is only a youngster and only a year in the merchant marine, has written the adventures of the Charlot into fiction, or, rather, he has narrated the various true chapters of the ship's experiences in a way that is even stranger than fiction.

Asked if he would quit the sea after his wild ride on the Charlot, he said: "Hell's bells, no! This is the life, take it from me."
