BISHOP W. T. SUMNER and Dean Vincent are the leaders in the local celebration of the 100th anniversary of the mission of the Episcopal church in Oregon. In Oregon the last 70 years have witnessed wonderful growth in the expansion of the church. When the first service was held by Rev. William Richmond, a city numbered only 1500 souls. Only two clergy attended the first convention. The church today has 1500 members and plans for church building mark the programme of the diocese.

During the absence of the rector in Alaska the services at St. David's church, East Eleventh and Belmont streets, are being taken by Rev. W. Ernest Stockley, rector of Grace church, Clinton, Or. Rev. No branch of the church shows more vigorous growth. Great plans are being made for the 2000th anniversary of the general convention to be held next year.

The presiding bishop and council of the Episcopal church have just made a visit to the White House, where they briefly addressed the president as follows: "Mr. President, I am the bishop of Tennessee and also the presiding bishop of the Episcopal church in America. This year we are celebrating the centennial of the first missionary society. We come here today to pay our respects to you and to congratulate you on your stand for peace and righteousness, not only in this country, but Quakers Hold Meeting in Honor of Centennial.

Gathering Commemorates Founding of Indiana Organization.

RICHMOND, Ind., Aug. 20.—The 100th anniversary of the founding of the Indiana yearly meeting of Friends, the largest body of Quakers in the world, was commemorated here Monday.

The Indiana meeting was organized in Richmond in a log church on October 8, 1821. Only five sectional associations of Quakers in North America are older. All of these meetings will take part in the Indiana centennial.

Yearly meetings organized before Indiana were New England, 1661; Baltimore, 1673; Philadelphia, 1681; New York, 1695; North Carolina, 1698, and Ohio, 1812.

Quaker bodies organized since were western Indiana, 1858; Iowa, 1860; Canadian Quakers, 1872; first conference in Ohio, 1892; Oregon, 1893; Colorado, 1898, and Nebraska, 1907.

The historical background of the Indiana yearly meeting is a contribution to the Quaker church and its efforts for social reform were presented at a meeting in the old East Main-street Friends' church.

Timothy Nicholson, 92 years the senior member of the Indiana yearly meeting, was the outstanding figure of the celebration. For nearly 70 years he has been active in prison reform, and he has been president of the Indiana Anti-Slavery league since its organization.

Professor Rufus M. Jones, head of the department of philosophy in Haverford college, spoke on "The Future of Quakerism," and Professor Harlow Lindsey, director of the Department of archives and history of the University of Pennsylvania, read a history of this yearly meeting.

Later in the day incidents in the history of the Quaker church were presented in a pageant on the campus of Earlham college.

Quavery was one of the chief causes for the early Quaker movement from the Carolinas, Georgia, Tennessee and Virginia to eastern Indiana and western Ohio.

The chief labor of members of the Indiana yearly meeting in behalf of the slaves was exerted through the "underground railway." The branches centered in Fountain City, nine miles north of Richmond.

Secretary of the board of the Indiana yearly meeting, was head of the underground system. He is credited with assisting 3000 slaves northward, and another member of the meeting with helping 2700.

Organizing mission work among the Shawnee Indians at Wapakoneta, O., in 1821, the Indiana yearly meeting has since been called to the attention of the Indiana to this day.

This meeting is said to be the only Friends body that officially has undertaken a mission work. The committee was appointed in 1867 and has since done notable work in this regard.

S. Edgar Nicholson, presiding clerk of the Indiana yearly meeting, is secretary of the Anti-Slavery League of America.

Methodists Spread Good Will Through Charity Stores.

Plants of National Chain Will Be Established in Northwest.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Sala of old clothes and household goods to the poor by the Methodist Episcopal church runs into an annual total of $350,000, it was announced here by the Methodist committee on conservation and advance.

This field has been entered in a large scale by the Methodists in their "goodwill" programme. They have 19 establishments in as many big cities, with property held in trust of more than $1,000,000. They project 25 more plants by 1924.

These activities were reviewed by the conservation committee by Dr. David D. Forest of Philadelphia, secretary of the Methodist board of home missions and church extension. In summarizing his report, the committee said:

"These plants are engaged in gathering castoff clothing, shoes, furniture, books and other articles necessary to the household. These are renovated and sold in stores to the poor at ridiculously low prices. The profit is used to purchase property for any reason whatsoever may obtain for these plants. Their purpose is to salvage human beings from economic and moral wreckage, and their motto 'Not charity, but a chance. Profit is no object.'

"During the last year $108,000 was paid out in wages. 292,300 days' work was furnished to the unemployed. $100,000 worth of clothing and kind of economic aid. More than 250,000 poor bought at the stores. The maximum number of people who have homes of the well-to-do. Fourteen
