SIGNS POINT TO NEW BEAVER MANAGER FOR 1922 SEASON

Jaw, too, an even more prominent and protuberant Scotch jaw than the ers are rising to accommodate the gludge's, but he figures he has taken about enough punishment. Then both year. he and the judge incline to the be-lief that the fans will take more kindly to a continuation of McCredie ownership if Walt accepts the role f goat and turns over the pilot's job to some one else.

Walt's theory is that a manager should be the goat anyhow. As he remarked some weeks ago in an interview in this column: "If I owned a baseball club myself I would figure on making the manager the soat and other enterview of the soat and the so remarked some weeks ago in an interview in this column: "If I owned

There are numerous signs, very plainly to be read, that the judge has made up his mind to held on. One is that he is looking around for a new ball park. His lease on the Vaughn-street in-closure, which is owned by the Port-land Railway, Light & Power comclosure, which is owned by the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, expires this winter. While he no doubt could get that lease renewed he isn't sure that he wants to. other northwestern university, and the three Japanese universities of Waseda toured the United States this year and Professor Iso Ave, who chaperoned the team, discussed this plan at some length with Meisnest. One result of their conference was that the Washington baseball team now is en route to Japan for a series of games. Merell McGlinis, manager of the team, has been authorized to make arrangements while there for the formation of the proposed league, If it is formed, and it very probably Then ever and anon the judge men-t'ens somebody or other who might make a good manager for the club.

More than once the judge has said: "What would you think of Bill Speas as manager next year? Don't you think he would go pretty will with the fans?" All of which indicates something or other.

Then about the sale of hallplayers. This eruption by Prexy Klepper to the effect that Pillette ...nd Syl Johnthe effect that Pillette and Syl Johnson should bring $50,000 from some major-league club is extravagantly far-fetched. They are good prospects, true enough, but not $50,000 prospects. Neither are there $80,000 worth of hallplayers on the Portland club—or if there are, then there are $10,000,000 worth of ballplayers in the San Francisco or Los Angeles or Sacramento clubs, and aged Sam Crawford ought to sell for a couple of hundred thousand fish despite his spavined legs.

It is quite true that a lot of major-league clubs want Pillette, and it also league clubs want Pillette, and it also a good chance- to beat them in the October 29 game in Portland? I do. A first-class chance. Even inexperitable in the should be a sweet such as the control of th pitcher. It further is true that Syl lieve we can give them a run for it Johnson is a good prospect and some when we play at Berkeley Octo-day will make his mark in the majors, ber 22." though he still has some distance to go. But as $50,000 ballplayers—well, they are hardly that. Not yet.

for player, and men who unquestion-ably make good. No more being caught with a bush league lineup. This shows a certain change of heart and policy on the part of the judge. Of course the solution the fans all want is to have the judge sell. They want new blood in the cwnership, no question as to that. But if he is bound and determined to keep the club, and that now seems certain, it is a little bit encouraging New York, 84 49 882 Boston.... 63 67 483 to know that he really intends to Gleveland, 83 51 629 Detroit... 64 78 467 get some ball players who can give Washing n 67 69 498 Philadel'is 47 83 363 Washing n 67 69 498 Philadel'is 47 83 363 this city a team.

Yep, you guessed it. Football, of course. The intercollegiate season officially opens next Thursday, From then n the voice of the coach will sound raucquely through the land.

It is becoming almost as apparent that Waiter McCredie will not manage next year's team, even if the judge does own it. Wait has a Scotch is well as the primitive love of combatting the property of the primitive love of combatting that we have managed as a barrent and are under construction, grandstands are under construction, grandstands are under construction.

Of course this programme might be changed and Walter might again handle the reins. But he has no present intention of doing it, that much is sure. He did not want to manage the club this year—did it only because the judge begged him to. He had already signed the nice, fat contract that Bill Kenworthy fell into after his withdrawal, to manage

While Benefiel was in Scattle recently he discussed with Graduate Manager Meisnest of Washington a project for linking the Pacific Northwestern universities into an inter-collegiate baseball league with the Japanese universities, this league to include Washington, Oregon and one other northwestern university, and

The other day the judge took an automobile ride to the east side with a real estate man and looked over a site that would make a fine ball park. It isn't far out, either.

t'ens somebody or other who might make a good manager for the club. One he has mentioned frequently is B'ill Speas. Bill, as a Portland outfielder, for many years was a mighty popular player here. He retired iong before his sun had set in the coast icague to manage the Regina club of the Western Canada league—Bill is an ambitious chap and not at all shiftless and improvident, like the average ballplayer. He is thinking of tomorrow all the time and wants to rise as a manager, so for that reason was perfectly willing to learn the ropes in an abscure circuit.

A few weeks ago the Regina club blew up and Bill was out of a job Hc went to Joplin, in the Western league, to finish the season there as a player, but with the proviso that he is a free agent thereafter. He will return to Portland, as usual, to winter.

More than once the judge has said: customers for any team to beat,

"The Oregon Aggles, I think, also will be considerably stronger than last season. Washington State has lost two great players in Hamilton and Gillis, and you can't replace men like them. Nevertheless, the Pullman aggregation should be very formidable. As for Washington, if Bagshaw can overcome the backfield weakness

But to return to the subject. Further indicating the intention of the judge to keep the team is his frequent remark that if he sells Pillette or Johnson or Cox or anybody else to a major Jeague ball club it will not be until he knows in writing the names of the ball players who will be sent west in payment therefor, No more Chicago Cubs or Detroit promises. says the judge. Hereafter it is player for player, and men who unquestionably make good. No more heles. ABERDEEN, Wash., Sept. 16 .- (Spe-
