MARGOT ASQUITH FINDS SUBJECT OF FLAPPER IS HARDLY WORTH WHILE STUDYING, BUT IS SHOCKED BY HER ANTICS

"Snuggle-Pupping" and "Petting Parties" Receive Only Passing Notice, While Celebrated Englishwoman Talks of Dances and Drink and Declares American Voice Is Not Only Nasal but Noisy, and People Lacking in Humor.

Pencil Sketch of Mrs Asquith

By MARGOT ASQUITH,
(Wife of the ex-Prime Minister of Great Britain.)

IF THE newspapers and their reporters are to be believed, there is tremendous interest in America in the subject of the young girls and their recently acquired freedom. In every city I visited, "What do you think about flappers?" was a question invariably asked by the pressman.

When the oft-repeated inquiry came up, I listened with absent mind and without committing myself to a subject that, while disturbing the morals of the female questioners, bored me to such an extent that I almost screamed when it was mentioned.

So I am ashamed to say that I gave in reply little that could be called sensational copy. It was evident that I was expected to be shocked at the frank display of feminine legs, at the almost universal custom of "bobbing" the hair, and of the freedom of their association with young men and boys.

The subject finally appeared to be of such interest that I resolved to observe the flappers closely on my travels. There were seldom any in the audiences at my lectures, and for the most part the flapper, in the American sense of the word, in of the school girl age (though often she is employed), and, of course, would find little to interest her in anything I might say.

With us at home, the word "flapper" meant originally (and that was before the war) what Americans at that time called sub-debs. The word obviously comes from the analogy of a young bird, and as young girls a few years ago in America were called "chickens," the adoption of the restrictive word "flapper" was logical.

* * *

So much for etymology. The subject, so interesting to Americans, I found only partly worth while studying.

As I said, I had few chances to get a close acquaintance with American flappers in the ordinary routine of my day. But at Buffalo, in a sunny street outside the station, I got my first close view of her.

There were two young women, short-skirted, giggling girls, walking with their admirers, who were armed with kodaks.

One of the young men threw a girl over his shoulder with her legs straight out, while the other photographed them. I was glad to realize that, while praying that I would never again be interviewed upon the subject, I would be in a better position to answer my fervent questioners in the future.

In Chicago, I was told that the people had many important problems of a civic nature to discuss and settle. Yet I found the citizens, if one might judge by their newspaper headlines, holding indignation meetings on such subjects as:

"Blame Girls for 'Snuggle-Pupping' and 'Petting Parties.'"

"Male Flappers' Parents Hold Indignation Meeting."

"Boys who don't follow fair companions' pace called 'sissies, poor boobs' and 'flat tires.'"

* * *

It was while I was traveling that I came across Lord Lee's criticism of something I was reported to have said earlier in my lectures regarding the violation of the prohibition laws by the young women of America. It was as follows:

"Lord Lee defends American young women!

"Calls Mrs. Asquith's charges cruel, ludicrous and untrue.

"Speaking at the English-speaking union luncheon, Lord Lee said the statement attributed to the famous countrywoman of his now in the United States was as cruel as it was ludicrous and untrue. He added that he could testify from 30 years of personal observation in America and from reliable information from various quarters and that he was speaking seriously."

Lord Lee has only got to be in America ten days to change his opinion. I have received signed letters from every quarter of the country thanking me for expressing my opinion and will quote from one:

NEW YORK CITY, 1922.—Madam: If you wish for very substantial proof of the exactitude of your remark that maidens get drunk at dances, all you have to do is to send someone, unobtrusively, to (I am not going to give the name of the lady or the hotel) to obtain from the waiters and waitresses an account of the lamentable condition in which scores of the girls were taken home after two recent balls held in the hotel ——, one of the most fashionable hotels in the suburbs of New York.

It was not the fault of the management, and I am told no more dances of the sort will be permitted there.

I am a very disgusted sister of one of the young girls and am trying to dissuade her from accepting intoxicants at these parties.

This is only one of many letters I received on this subject.

* * *

I do not think the voices in America, either of the flappers or their elders, are generally musical; they are nasal and noisy, and, though Americans have a great deal of geniality and love of fun, I am so slow at picking up the "American language" that I think I probably miss much of the irony and "finesse" that characterizes our better kind of humor.

The Canadians, who are of British stock, have a better sense of humor. But humor is always a dangerous subject to write about, and when I remember the stupid things that evoke the laughter of our public in the theaters at home I feel I had better walk warily.

I am Scotch, and as a nation we have been accused of lack of humor. I cannot be expected to agree with this; nevertheless I remember being told in my youth of one man who said:

"Oh! aye; Jock undoubtedly jokes; but he jokes with facility. I joke, too, but with difficulty."

* * *

The French have a far finer sense of humor than any other nation in the world, and all they say is a constant source of amusement to me.

It is pardonable not to laugh at what is funny, but sudden guffaws at bad jokes is a true test of a sense of humor.

In the following excerpt from a Cincinnati paper there is a subtle touch, perhaps, that is missed by the dullest of us!

"Margot Asquith, wife of the former prime minister of England, is in Cincinnati.

"Men who like to believe that they know more than their wives would be happy with a woman like Margot for a wife. She knows more than most men, and there is scarcely anything she cannot or will not talk about.

"She wrote a book that is an encyclopedia of the inside history of British politics and history of her time.

"There aren't many like Margot. Husbands who long after the honeymoon like to be entertained will envy Asquith his Margot. It must be pleasant to have a Margot in the house."

I expect the writer was pulling my leg—to use a slang expression—or possibly pitying my husband, but it amused me.

* * *

On my second visit to Washington, hoping to get some "inside" history of American politics, I went one afternoon to the senate. The four-power treaty was being discussed, but the debate was languid, and more seats were unoccupied than senators speaking.

Except for a tribune, the senate is like the "chambre" in Paris; everyone walks about, and you cannot be sure that any of the senators will speak from the seat that they occupied the day before, which makes it rather confusing to a stranger.

The same day I went to see Mr. Hughes in the department of state. He is remarkably handsome, and has a striking intelligence, and charming manners, but as one of his delightful secretaries remained in the room we said nothing worth recording.

I told him what, alas, he must have heard a thousand times, that his opening speech on disarmament at the Washington conference had created a profound impression in my country, if not all over the world; and what perhaps he did not know so well, that there never was a closer feeling than that which existed between England and America today.

When I say this with all the eloquence I can command at every lecture, though it is always cheered, it is seldom reported, and I read in one of the papers:

"What Mrs. Margot Asquith said about the handclasp of Great Britain and the United States is doubtful and conventional."

I am glad to be called conventional, but what I say is not doubtful; it is true.

So says Margot Asquith—an avowed enemy of drink and, until she saw America, a staunch supporter of prohibition.

POLICEMAN SALUTES CAPTAIN WHO FACES COURT AS BURGLAR

Officer Who Had Crossed Ocean During War on Mariner's Boat Has Hard Time Believing That Veteran Is Under Arrest.

BY JESSE HENDERSON.
(Copyright, 1922, by The Oregonian.)

NEW YORK, April 29.—(Special.)—Truth is so much more entertaining than fiction that it is a wonder anyone reads anything but the newspapers. This week we have had a United States shipping board captain of a transport who turned burglar. We have had the pearl-bedecked countess who came over in the steerage. We have had a bridal kiss 2500 feet above Broadway and Forty-second street. And—oh, a number of things.

* * *

After piloting American soldiers overseas between floating mines and Hun submarines Captain Herbert J. Slabery could not stand a mere routine job after his ship was out of commission and the war over. Or perhaps he could not get a routine job.

Anyway, he fell in with a holdup gang, who initiated him into their customs and sent him forth to garner an honest living. The captain's first attempt was his last. For the gang faded on the approach of a policeman and Slabery, dashing out of a cigar store with the contents of the till, dashed into the officer's arms.

While Slabery was being questioned by a detective, a patrolman amazed those present by saluting the prisoner. The patrolman, who had traveled across on Slabery's boat, could not believe the captain was really a holdup gangster. This incident got under Slabery's skin and he explained the workings of his gang with a conscientious thoroughness which has made it necessary for the authorities to shield him from gangsters' vengeance.

* * *

Just as surprising was the countess, bedecked with pearls, who tripped jauntily from the steerage of an ocean liner and flirted with the Ellis island officials in a magnificent sealskin coat. Suspicion is the lawful heritage of Ellis island officials. The more prosperous she dressed and the more like a countess she looked the more they wagged a dubious head. At last, however, they satisfied themselves that Christiania Rosenkrantz really was a Danish countess, and they permitted the woman, her pearls, her diamonds and her 50 traveling bags to depart. The countess, with her son, hopped into a taxicab. "I only wanted to study steerage conditions," she explained.

* * *

The unusual thing about the wedding kiss of Sarah Cookefair and Albert Schlafke was that it happened 2500 feet nearer heaven than is customary and 10,000 people heard it. Every owner of a radio set listened in on that wedding of the nurse and the veteran camp physical director. The voice of the flying parson, Belvin Maynard, rang clearly through the air and when a feminine voice remarked, shyly, "I do," 10,000 invisible guests drew long breaths.

* * *

On this last day of the week the town is keeping one eye on Papa Joffre and the other on the clock. Papa Joffre goes about the moment daylight saving comes. Everyone has had a fine time rushing to watch the marshal and his wife enter or leave their hotel. Mamma Joffre has spent a lot of afternoons shopping for the sort of clothes in which a plump and pleasant woman looks her best. They evidently don't specialize in plump and pleasant garb along the Rue de la Paix.

* * *

But a day in the life of a Joffre is nothing compared with that in the life of a daylight saver. For a week no train will go at any hour which corresponds with your watch, and a trip across New York state will be a succession of putting the old timepiece forward and jerking it back in compliance with daylight or non-daylight rules in the various towns visited. Oh, well, it takes your mind off your troubles.

* * *

Meanwhile there's another horse show that has brought out the fact that women have progressed to the point where they are edging men out of the judges' places at a horseflesh affair. The first woman to judge "officers' chargers"—whatever that is—did it to the satisfaction of all concerned at the Durland horse show just outside Central park. Horsemen all seem to consider this a famous victory for the falger sex, and it is here so recorded.

Members' day was featured at the weekly luncheon of the Business Women's club held Thursday noon at the Y. W. C. A. social hall. Miss Adelia Prichard, president, presided. Short talks were made by members of the executive council, telling of some of the work accomplished during the year and plans for future activities. Reports were read by Miss Alice C. Hutchinson, chairman of the house committee; Miss Marie W. Sommers, chairman of the programme committee; Mrs. Virginia Mueller, chairman of the hospitality committee; Miss Clara Redheffer, chairman of the membership committee; Mrs. H. B. Maxwell, treasurer, and Miss Louise Hacker, chairman of the convention committee. Dr. Estella Ford Warner, chairman of the finance committee, made a report on the benefit performance of "My Lady Friends" given last week at the Baker Theater which showed it was a financial as well as social success. Mrs. Josephine H. Forney gave a short description of the new publicity which the chamber of commerce is sending out in an attempt to bring conventions to Portland and make Portland known as the convention city. A membership campaign will be launched by the club in May which will continue for one month. It will be conducted by Miss Clara Redheffer, chairman of the membership committee.

J. E. Dunn, manager of the Hazelwood Cream company, will be speaker at the luncheon of the Business Women's club next Thursday. His subject will be "Milk and Its Products." Miss Opal E. Bowen will be hostess.

* * *

Glencoe Parent-Teacher association held a special meeting on April 21. A short musical programme was rendered, but the outstanding feature of the evening was the splendid talk given by William F. Woodward of the board of education on "The Present Crisis in School Affairs." Refreshments were served during the social hour at the close of the evening.

* * *

The Corriente club was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. Etta Rossman, 1080 Cleveland avenue, Tuesday. The rooms were artistically decorated with peach blossoms and spring flowers. Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock. Members responded to roll-call with a continuance of the study of the state constitution which was followed by a paper on "Chinese Walls, Highways and Bridges," and Mrs. Agnes Bradshaw gave a reading on "A Hunter of Plants."

The next meeting of the club will be at the Y. W. C. A. on May 9, with Mrs. Sarah Clarke as hostess.

* * *

Daughers of the Covenant will meet Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the B'nai B'rith building. A social hour will follow the business session and will include a pleasant surprise that has been prepared by the social committee.

* * *

The next regular meeting of the American Legion auxiliary will be held at the Armory tomorrow evening, jointly with the American Legion of Portland post No. 1. After a brief business meeting an interesting programme prepared by Byron E. Beattie will be presented.

* * *

The Woman's Guild of Grace Memorial Episcopal church will hold its monthly luncheon at the parish house, East Seventeenth North and Weidler streets, on Tuesday, May 2, beginning at 12:30 o'clock. The receipts of these luncheons are added to the building fund.

Early in May the Woman's Guild will hold a rummage sale.

* * *

A regular meeting of the Portland association of club leaders of boys' and girls' work will be held Tuesday at 2 P. M. at the central library. W. J. H. Clark of the school board will speak and a club will be present to demonstrate the ways to conduct a model club meeting. This will be of interest to all club leaders and a good attendance will be expected.

* * *

An event of interest to the parents and friends of children in Scott school, Laurelhurst, will be the annual silver tea to be given by the parent-teacher circle Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the school. Mrs. Ralph Collett, Mrs. O. Laurgaard, Mrs. E. A. Parker, Mrs. C. M. Hall and Mrs. Will E. Jones will pour. A cordial invitation is extended to all patrons of the school.

* * *

Royal circle, Neighbors of Woodcraft, will initiate a class next Wednesday night at the Woodmen of the World hall, 128 Eleventh street. The ceremony will be followed by games and dancing. All members are invited to attend.

* * *

The current literature department of the Portland woman's club will be entertained at the home of Mrs. J. Philippe Tamesie, 11 Floral avenue, Thursday. Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock and the assisting hostesses will be Mrs. Thaxter Reed, Mrs. Wildes Veazie, Mrs. Arthur Johnson, Mrs. J. B. Coffey, Mrs. H. B. Anderson, Mrs. H. Christofferson and Dr. Lucy Waters. Following the luncheon Mrs. George Rossman will read "If Winter Comes," by A. S. Hutchinson. Take Montavilla car.

The north Willamette district of the Degree of Honor Protective association, composing lodges of The Dalles, Astoria, Wilsonville, Oswego, Tigard, Newberg, Oregon City and Portland, will hold a district convention at Hillsboro on Saturday, May 6, in the Masonic hall, corner Second and Washington street. The convention will be called to order at 9 A. M. and at 1:30 P. M. A large class of candidates will be initiated into the order by Tabor lodge, No. 55, degree staff of Portland. Columbia lodge No. 1, of Portland, will exemplify opening and closing ceremonies. Mrs. Helen Deickman of Hillsboro is president of the convention and Mrs. Lily Young of Wilsonville is secretary.

* * *

The regular monthly meeting of the league of women voters will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock in room A, library. There will be a speaker and a discussion of tax issues of the present political campaign. Mrs. C. B. Simmons, who will return on Wednesday, will report on the Pan-American conference and league of women voters' convention and give "close-ups" regarding Lady Astor, who was the principal speaker at the convention at which Mrs. Simmons has represented Oregon. Mrs. Simmons has been to many of the social affairs at Washington and Baltimore. She will leave Washington this afternoon after a reception which Mrs. Harding will give for the delegates who are representative women from all the Americas. On Thursday the delegates were entertained by Mrs. Gifford Pinchott and other prominent Washington women and in the evening they were addressed by Secretary Hughes. All women interested are invited to attend.

The annual luncheon of the Portland Shakespeare Study club given last Wednesday at noon in the Tyrolean room of the Hotel Benson was a most delightful affair in every detail. The tables were beautifully decorated with huge centerpieces of roses and tulips and the programme presented was a delightful one.

Greetings were given by the president, Mrs. R. E. Jones, and members responded to rollcall with quotations from Shakespeare. Paul Davies entertained with a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. Robert Sprague and Mrs. Juanita Heaton Judge gave an excellent programme of solos, accompanied by Paul Petri.

The talk of the afternoon was on "The History and Romance of Anthony and Cleopatra," given by Mrs. Alva Lee Stephens, and Mrs. Frank Swanton gave a talk on "Humane Week."

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off With Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely curative result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.—Adv.

How To Make Your Figure More Youthful and Beautiful

Remarkable Results Obtained By Women Everywhere Prove Amazing Value of MASTIN'S Vitamon Tablets to Fill Out Hollows and Put On Firm Flesh where Most Needed.
