He declared, however, that the committee had never thought that it had any power to pass upon sums owing by the German government, but merely that it had been requested to advise the reparations commission as to a basis upon which Germany could raise a loan. He said there had been no discussion of the capital amounts of reparations payments, but only of a possible arrangement for annual payments, and these, either in cash or in kind, were the only methods whereby Germany could effect payment of her just debts.

The text of Mr. Morgan's statement follows:

"When I was invited by the reparations commission to serve on the bankers' committee, I had some hesitation in accepting, as it appeared that under the terms of the reforence I could accomplish little more by coming to Paris than by cable advice from New York. Upon further consideration, however, I felt that the matter was of such enormous importance to Europe and also to the United States because of their commercial relations with Europe, that I could not well refuse.

"Therefore, in the hope that something constructive could be arrived at, I came, purely as a private citizen, holding no authority from my government to discuss in any way, matters under their control, but as a banker engaged in the distribution of securities in the investment markets of the United States and only representing those markets insofar as their condition might permit.

America Is Disinterested.

America Is Disinterested. America is Disinterested.

"I explained at the first meeting of the committee that there is no interest in the United States in a loan to Germanp, per se. There is, back door of the bakery into the Siler mill yard and have not since however, in my opinion, a growing appreciation in the United States of appreciation in the United states the fact that its own prosperity is to a degree dependent upon the prosperity of the allied nations, and that the prosperity of the latter is, in a large degree, dependent upon the rehabilitation of German credit. "I consequently believed that the American banker and investor could be interested to a substantial de-gree in the purchase of German obligations if two fundamental condi-tions were satisfactorily established. Thirst, such a loan should be at the request and would be for the benefit of the allied nations. This could in no way be better expressed than by the active co-operation of the private bankers of the allied countries in the distribution of the German securities to their nationals.

German Co-operation Needed.

"Second, through the technical security to be given by Germany and the rehabilitation of its internal financial situation. Germany should clearly show a desire to meet its obligations in the hope that by full full ment of these obligations it could re-establish its credit as one of the commercial nations of the world.

germany can effect payment of its just debts.

"I do not need to enlarge upon this, as it is fully stated in the published report of the committee to the commission.

"In view of the foregoing I am forced to the refuctant conclusion that neither of the conditions stated above, which I believe to be essential to a loan to Germany, could be compiled with, and that no loan to Germany of the character necessary in the situation could be offered to and purchased by the American investor. As it was to advise on this point alone that I was invited to serve on the committee by the reparations commission, it was necessary for me to explain this fact to the committee, as I am not competent and am therefore unwilling to advise on matters which pertain solely to the European governments.

General Settlement Made.

"I am now and shall continue to be ready to do everything in my power to assist in the solution of far as they depend for their solution upon an international loan to Germany, in which the American investor would take, part, is not possible without a general settlement, declared J. Plerpont Morgan, New York banker, in a statement tonight.

Mr. Morgan, the American representative on the international committee of bankers, who have been advising with the allied reparation commilesion concerning the possibility of an international loan to Germany, said that in his opinion the two fundamental conditions of American participation in such an enterprise were unanimity among the leaders and the establishment of the credit of the borrower.

The reparation commission, by voting 3 to 1 that the committee of bankers should discuss all questions which must be settled between the governments in order to arrive at the unanimity required for the reparations of the credit of the borrower.
