

SPEED-FLEND GOOSE RIDES ON RADIATOR

BOOSTER TAUGHT TO DRAW WAGON; CHICKEN TO RIDE.

FEATHERED PETS SMART

Two Other Birds Go for Jaunts on Handicars of Master's Bicycle—Swans Trained.

FEATHERED PETS OF PORTLAND PEOPLE ARE "SOME BIRDS" IN THE WORDS OF THE BARNYARD AND DO STUNTS LIKE EDUCATED FOLK.

Upper left—Napoleon and Crooky, educated chickens of Keith DeLong. Upper right—Bob, the speed-flend goose owned by Mrs. Eunice M. Bothwell, ready for a ride on the radiator of a car. Lower left—General Pershing and his family—swans on the lake in Laurelhurst park. Lower right—Napoleon and Crooky go riding on the handlebars of their master's bicycle.

Feathered pets have never received credit for any large amount of brain; in fact, many satirical epithets originate in the poultry yard to the disparagement of fowls. Take for instance the "silly little goose" phrase, or "O Robert, you great big goose." Then again, "some chickens," a comparison that is not always flattering to the hens in the barnyard, and son-in-law's pet phrase, for his maid, or "keeping with the honest bird that cucks" and cackles and lays eggs for son-in-law's breakfast. The only part of our story that is in keeping with the common impression regards the proud and haughty swan. To contradict the illusion that feathers cover bodies that taper off to necks that are beaded with heads containing dormant, unreasoning brains, step forward and be introduced to Bob, the speed flend goose, Napoleon and Crooky, educated chickens, and General Pershing, wife and family, particular swans of particular tastes. All of them, ladies and gentlemen, are home grown, hatched, raised and educated in Oregon; unfouled by the smudge and heat of a circus tent and unsullied by the stare of curious crowds.

Booster in Made Pet.
While Keith DeLong, 650 Nehalem street, lay in bed, an invalid for months, he drove away dull care by making a pet of Napoleon, a rooster. Napoleon grew fond of the boy and time went on and when Keith was able to leave his bed Napoleon began following him around. Later when Keith was able to ride a bicycle he placed Napoleon on the handle bars and taught him to ride. Napoleon, by the way, was young in those days, and it was not until he had mastered the art of "wheeling" that he began to take notice of the ladies. For beauty he had no taste whatever, and he chose for his mate, or companion, a certain hen with a crooked bill, called Crooky for short. Crooky also took to joy-riding and the pair and the hen are now fond of riding down streets, gadding around with splendid interest in their pastime, but no concern for the attention they receive.

Goose Rides Automobile.
But the doughty rooster on the handle bars of a bicycle takes on the limelight in point of daring when Bob, the speed flend goose, owned by Mrs. Eunice M. Bothwell, 825 Everest street, goes perched on the radiator of his mistress' automobile, balancing himself nicely to the motion of the car, leaning forward with joy when the car speeds and wags back and forth on the hood promenade deck according to his inclinations.

CAMP TO BE ATTRACTIVE

YOUNG MEN URGED TO TAKE VACATION WITH ARMY.
Dances, Picnics, Boating and Other Forms of Entertainment to Be Provided.
"Take your vacation with the army" is the substance of an invitation extended by the federal government to the young men of the northwest through the annual citizens' military training camp, which will open at Camp Lewis July 27, and close August 25. Colonel P. Whitworth, chief of staff of the 96th division, who will command the training camp, yesterday outlined the activities planned there for this summer and declared that less intensive training and more recreation and entertainment will be included in the camp programme this year than ever before. During the war period, and to some extent last summer, the training camp activities embodied the idea of making troops of recruits or students in as short a time as possible. Colonel Whitworth, however, is authority for the statement that there will be nothing intensive about the training at this summer's camp, but that rather the young men attending the camp will be made to enjoy the experience so thoroughly that he will wish to return to the camp next summer for the more advanced course in military science and tactics.

STEAM AND AIR VALVE SAID TO ELIMINATE LEAKAGE.
Apparatus invented by Gust Graffinger, Portland mechanic.

A new steam and air valve which is declared to eliminate leakage is the invention of Gust Graffinger, Portland sawmill mechanic, and a company known as the Graffinger Air Valve company, incorporated, has been organized for the manufacture of these valves. The valve has been tried out in actual work at the Peninsula Lumber company's mill and is declared to have proved successful. The valve is automatically closed and the greater the pressure of steam or air the more firmly it closes. This is brought about through the special construction of the gate to the valve opening. The gate is placed on the inside of the steam chamber and is pressed against the opening or exit by a spring. In opening the gate for the release of the steam a plunger operated by a lever presses it inward away from the opening.

STUDY OF CITY PLANNED

CLUB STARTS COMPREHENSIVE DATA GATHERING.
Survey Intended to Give Most Complete Library of Information Yet Assembled Here.
A study of Portland as a city, including an analysis of its physical machinery, amounting to an inventory of its equipment, and a study of the organization of its operative features, such as laws and personnel of administration, is a unique plan of civic work being evolved by the city club of Portland through its public affairs committee. The summation of the survey is intended to give the city club the most complete library of information on local municipal affairs that has been assembled. Dr. Otis B. Wright is chairman of the committee, of which Norman F. Coleman, J. A. Cranston, C. C. Ludwig, W. H. Marsh and Sinclair A. Wilson are members. The scheme of the study is being planned by Mr. Marsh and will be submitted to the club this week in chart form.

MANY TOURISTS LOOKING FOR PROPERTY IN WEST

One Family Buys Ranch Near Kalama, Wash., and Others Inspect Tracts in Neighborhood of Portland.

BY ADDISON BENNETT.
K. J. KOIVULA, Mrs. Koivula and two small children are all the way from Detroit, Mich., and do not care where they go when they go, just so they are keeping going. They may winter in California.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Barker, with their 20-year-old son, Ben Harrison Barker, are looking for a ranch to buy or rent. They are from Sacramento, Cal., and for ten years traveled with another son and brother, who was ill for many years. He died a year ago last March.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Craig have a west ranch near Pendleton, and reside in the town. They are here for the Rose Festival, and left Saturday for a run to Seaside and back.

One very pleasant feature of the camp, one that makes Superintendant Ready feel pleasant, is that there is no complaint about losses. Some of the campers every day save their plunder at the camp and take a spin up or down the highway, maybe to Salem or Albany, and return at night to find everything just as they left it. This is not only pleasing to Mr. Keady, but the management in general, but speaks well for the travelers.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Gibbons and their fine family of four children, John, age 16; Elizabeth, 14; Jessie, 13, and Alice, 12, are from Butte, Mont., where for years Mr. Gibbons has worked in the mines. He finally got weary of the mines and
