suggested by the government in its June report. Corn — Trade was not particularly active and prices held within a com-paratively narrow range. Some of the early selling was based on reports of beneficial rains over the belt, but the strength in the cash market later stood out as a more potent factor. The demand for spot offerings today was exceptionally good at gains of a quarter to a half cent as compared with the futures. Country selling may increase somewhat on bulges, but present indications are for a mod-erate movement, while the commercial demand promises to continue good. We consider the market on an investment basis.
