Octogenarian Generals Review Troops

WHEN the 3d cavalry recently celebrated its 76th birthday Generals Nelson A. Miles and Anson Mills, 83 and 88 respectively, were on the job to review the troops. Both commanded the outfit many years before and take great pride in its appearance and history.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York city recently was given $1,000,000 by George F. Baker, chairman of the board of directors of the First National bank of that city. Mr. Baker is now touring Europe.

Checker fans, here's the latest. It's a game of lawn checkers. Harry Latz of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., invented it. The novel checkerboard consists of grass sods and earth placed in respective positions and manipulated on the same style as ordinary checkers, only poles are used to move.

After four years work has again been resumed on the Jefferson Davis monument which is being erected at Fairview, Ky., birthplace of the president of the confederacy. It lagged for lack of funds. It will be of concrete and will stand 351 feet high.

On the Majestic, largest steamship afloat, is a magnificent pool. Miss Winnie Elliott, holder of the diploma of the Royal Lifesaving society of England, is the instructor. She is, of course, an expert swimmer.

Each spring cutter patrols are kept busy opening safety lanes for steamships plying between this country and Europe. As the icebergs break away from Greenland's icy shores they are caught up by the Labrador current and eventually arrive in the steamer lanes, constituting grave menaces. Cutter crews locate and chart the bergs and then broadcast them by radio.

When King George of England and his party visited the Arras sector recently "among those present" was none other than Ferdinand Foch, marshal of France, who related stories of the terrible battles which raged there during the fighting when the fate of the world was in the balance. The king seemed very much interested.
