VIING with the brightest tints of the rainbow, Portland women have chosen their frocks of the most brilliant and unusual colors this summer. Whereas the modiste of a few years ago would touch a creation with a daring dash of color, now the authorities on good dressing lavish color in their designs. Noticeable, too, are Milady's hats this season. At many social gatherings, a person might fancy he was in a flower garden. The large floppy straws as well as trim hats of silk and satin are gaily ornamented with flowers, so perfect that they look positively real. One of the recent fashion revues was the gathering last Monday on the battleship Connecticut. The occasion was the dancant given by the officers of the battleship and the six destroyers anchored in the harbor. It was one of the most picturesque affairs ever planned in the city. Society maids and matrons were their most becoming dresses, which were especially effective against the trim uniforms of the officers, and the white flannels and blue jackets of the civilian men aboard. A canvas was stretched over the quarterdeck, and from it green boughs and garlands of roses were suspended. Handsome flags of every nation were placed along the edges of the canvas. A band and two orchestras kept the dancers busy. Many expressions were heard from the navy men to the effect that Portland girls dance particularly well. One of the features of the afternoon was the presentation by Rear-Admiral J. V. Chase of a miniature admiral's flag to Miss Harriet Griffith, queen of Rosaria. Among the throngs of society folk whose attractive costumes were greatly admired was Mrs. Henry Chaney, who wore a striking white sport costume. Mrs. Josephine Andrews was attired in a gray outfit. Black and white was worn becomingly by Miss Jane Talbot. Miss Gladys Dunne wore a frock of orange handkerchief linen with a smart hat. Mrs. W. B. Roberson wore an orchid sport costume. Mrs. Guy Webster Talbot's costume was of gray. Miss Harriet Griffith was gowned in orchid, and wore a stunning purple hat with a large pink rose. Mrs. Natt McDougall wore a lovely watermelon crepe, with an Alice blue hat. Mrs. Clift Lamping was stunning in a white sweater and skirt, and wore an orchid hat. Miss Isabel Clark wore a black and white costume. Mrs. Van Rensselaer Sternburgh wore a white sport costume. Mrs. C. F. Adams wore a handsome black gown and hat. Miss Elizabeth Halley was attractive in a peach-colored sweater and hat to match. Mrs. Clarence Eubanks was stunning in a sport costume of black and white. Miss Alberta Bair wore a gray sweater, and an attractive hat of cerise. Miss Mayme Helen Flynn was attired in an attractive gown of yellow with a smart red hat. Mrs. Henry T. Mayo was stately in black satin with hat to match, and a corsage of dainty pink flowers. A large picture hat and a black and white costume was most becoming to Mrs. Richard M. Blatchford. Mrs. C. E. Dentler's gown was of heavy white embroidered silk. Her daughter, Miss Jeannette, wore orchid organdie with fluted ruffles of pink. A chic sport costume was attractive to Miss Nan Montgomery, who wore an Alice blue sweater, white silk skirt, and large hat. The festival princesses, clad in becoming costumes, attracted considerable attention. Miss Alice Bowman wore a sport dress trimmed with heavy braiding, with a jaunty white hat. Miss Janet House's georgette dress was set off by a large, filmy black hat. Mrs. George L. Baker was charming in a dull blue georgette crepe dress with white beading, with a white hat. Mrs. Clarence E. Dentler, wife of Colonel Dentler, with her daughter, Miss Jeannette, entertained delightfully at tea Wednesday for a coterie of friends. Blue delphinium with pink rosebuds adorned the tea table and tall Japanese flag lilies were used in the reception room. Receiving with the hostesses were the honor guests, Mrs. Richard N. Blatchford, wife of General Blatchford; Mrs. Henry T. Mayo, wife of Admiral Mayo, and Mrs. George L. Baker, wife of Mayor Baker. Miss Helen Jones and John Dentler gave vocal solos, and Miss Jeannette Dentler proved herself a graceful aesthetic dancer when she presented two interpretive dances. Her costume was of pale pink georgette crepe, caught with a single deep pink rose. Mrs. Arthur W. Bradbury poured, and Mrs. Pegram Whitworth cut ices. Assisting about the rooms were Mrs. Richard Park, Mrs. Creed C. Hammond, Miss Margaret McAdams, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Mary Holmes and Miss Vivian Gorham. Miss Martha Scott, the house guest of her cousin, Mrs. L. Allen Lewis, was the inspiration for an attractive bridge tea, at which Mrs. Lewis presided Monday afternoon. Those pouring and cutting ices were: Mrs. Helen Ladd Corbett, Mrs. Holt Wilson, Mrs. Theodore B. Wilcox and Mrs. Cyrus A. Dolph. Assisting about the rooms were: Mrs. Arthur Sherwood, Mrs. Gordon Forbes, Mrs. C. Hunt Lewis, Mrs. Guy Richards and Miss Dorothy Effinger. Mrs. Katharine Graham left Portland Monday for Wenatchee, where she will fill an engagement as leading woman in the stock company there. Those members of the Portland Hunt club who have not started vacationing, and all Portland followers of horse racing will spend July 4 at Vancouver, Wash., where the army relief society matinee will be held, under the auspices of the officers from the Vancouver army post. Advance announcements of the races indicate that they will be the nearest thing to real horse racing to be seen in this vicinity during the season; there being four professional stake races for thoroughbreds on the afternoon card. Another big event will be the Multnomah hotel steplechase, for a handsome trophy presented by Eric Hauser. In addition to the stake races and steplechase there will be several officers' races, a boys' pony race and the jumping classes. Many parties are being made up in Portland to attend the meet, the proceeds of which will be turned over to the army relief society, an organization taking care of the wives and families of deceased soldiers. An announcement of interest to her many friends is the engagement of Miss Janet Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Trimble Peters, to Leonard Melville Floan of Seattle, Wash. Miss Peters belongs to one of the (Continued on Page 2)
