"Psychologist" Regulation Is Demanded.

FRAUD OPENLY CHARGED

City and State Health Officers Plead for Regulation of Visiting Practitioners.

Demand for the regulation of the so-called "psychologists" and psychoanalysts who have come to Portland during the past few years was voiced yesterday by leading medical men of the city and state and county health officers.

"We examine and regulate every dentist, physician, corn doctor, barber, electrician, plumber, painter, beauty parlor operator and truck driver," said Dr. George H. Parish, city health officer, "yet we allow any fly-by-night faker who claims to be a psychologist to come into our city and tamper with the unstrung weak-minded people. We will have to do something, and do it quickly, to regulate the practice of these self-proclaimed psychologists."

Dr. Parish and others who are demanding regulation are not taking into consideration any particular man, although the subject had been brought to their attention by the presence in the city of Orlando E. Miller, a lecturer who was denied the use of the municipal auditorium and whose record has been illuminated by the notices of the Portland and Seattle Ad clubs. Miller is but one of a long line of loquacious "psychologists" who have visited Portland in the past few years. Most of them have slyly drifted away after extracting many dollars from the pockets of credulous folks.

"Psychologists, who are without proper qualifications, are a menace to the health and well-being of the community," said Dr. Francis D. Stricker, state health officer. "Yet, by a queer twist of the law, we are unable to reach them or to bring them under our jurisdiction. Psychology is a science, a deep science and one that requires years of study. To be a good psychologist a man or woman in the profession must be a good physician, able to understand the physical as well as the mental side of life."

"The majority of these fellows who are preaching psychology and taking in thousands of dollars by holding classes and curing mental ills have no real scientific training whatever. I hold that the practitioner who tampers with or attempts to correct defects in the mental or nervous makeup of a person should be held as a physician of the highest type. "Since this fad of psychology has swept over the country we have witnessed a number of cases where medicine fakers, medicine show men and others of their ilk enter the field and grow rich at the expense of the weak and sick. In my opinion the state will have to do something to put these psychologists under control."

Frauds Openly Denounced. Dr. George Parish was emphatic in his denunciation of self-appointed "psychologists."

"The medical profession recognizes psychology and psychoanalysis as a scientific practice," declared the subject requires years of study and experience as a medical man. A physician may treat a man's arm or a man's leg, do a patch job and cause the patient to lose that member. But these fakirs who get control over mental cases described as being on the borderland between sanity and insanity can soon wreck the future of such a patient by driving him or her incurably insane.

"I think that any man who goes on a lecture platform and poses as a master of this science, that any fellow who conducts classes in psychology at from $50 to $1000 a class should be subjected to the same rigid inspection that is given the applicant for a license to practice medicine. These fakirs have gone far enough. It is time for the medical profession to stop their practices."

Dr. C. J. McCusker, president of the Oregon Psychological Association, would subject the psychologist to a rigid examination before allowing him to practice.

Character. Also Factor. "No man ought to be allowed to follow this art unless he is able properly to diagnose a case," he said. Such a person should at first have a proper medical education and know the physical as well as the mental make-up of man. These psychologists should be regulated and subjected to license and examination."

Test Held Essential. "While I do not believe that the psychologist should be subjected to the same examination as those who practice medicine, I do hold that he should be subjected to a test that will show he is the principle of psychology and that he is a reputable and trustworthy man."

"There is great danger for patients who trust their cases to the hands of quacks. Mental and nervous disorders require skillful treatment. A man who attempts to cure or correct the ailments without a proper knowledge of his work is a decided menace to the health and well-being of the community."

Not alone from the medical standpoint, but from the psychological factor regarded as a nuisance and a menace. The police would like to see their operations curbed.

"It is a well-known fact in eastern police circles," said Chief of Police Jenkins, "that many of these so-called psychologists are simply blackmailers. In order to treat and cure mental troubles they insist on their patients writing out full and complete histories of their lives. In New York the police have broken up several gangs who did nothing but business in selling back these intimate diaries to foolish people who

MANY SIGNATURES VOID

SHERIFF RECALL PETITIONS BEING CHECKED. Papers Expected to Be About 200 Short of Required Number if Ratio Continues.

MEDFORD, Or., July 8.—(Special.)—Checking of the names on the recall petition filed Wednesday for the recall of Sheriff Terrill is being continued by the county clerk. Out of about 800 signatures, 23 per cent have been thrown out as illegal. At this rate the petitions will be at least 200 short of the required 1235 when completed.

Files of the petition have requested that they be allowed to take the petitions out and have the stricken signatures corrected and verified. The county clerk has refused to allow this, as an official document cannot be removed.

John J. Jeffries of Portland is in the city. Mr. Jeffries is representative of the "right riders" who put back mandamus proceedings to compel him to do so would be instituted. The mandamus proceedings will be allowed to proceed as such action will put the burden of proof that the signatures are legal on the recall backers.

John J. Hoogstraet, local kliegite, said before the recall was filed that the kliegite "had no official connection with the recall, therefore it is assumed that Attorney Jeffries is acting for other interests in his threat of a mandamus."

Five days allowed for the sheriff to resign expire Monday. More requests were received today for withdrawal of names, but these will be held until the legality of such action is established.

BIG BUILDING PLANNED

10-STORY OFFICE STRUCTURE WOULD COST $2,000,000. Option Reported Already Held on Site of Old Flaming Home at Fifth and Taylor.

Plans for the erection of a 10-story office building, costing more than $2,000,000, on the site of the old Flaming home, bounded by Fifth, Sixth, Taylor and Salmon streets, are being promoted, it was learned yesterday. Definite announcement is expected to be made early this week.

It was learned that an option on the site was obtained several weeks ago from William C. Alvord, manager of the Henry Flaming estate, owner of the property, at an agreed price of $750,000.

It was said yesterday that the plans for the proposed structure were being drawn and that the money had been raised. Pending final closing of the deal, however, it was declared that the promoters preferred to remain in the background.

Details relative to financing have been in the hands of the brokerage firm of Hopkins & East in the Pittcock block and another real estate firm, it was learned.

H. C. Hopkins said it was expected to close the deal this week, so that the erection of the building could be started in the near future.

He denied that either officials of the Masonic orders or of the Federated Patriotic societies had any part to do with the promotion of the proposed structure.

The plans for the building, it was said, provide that it shall be the largest and most expensive business block in the city. The tentative plans provide for an auditorium with a seating capacity for 15,000 people and a restaurant to be located on the three upper stories.
