PRESIDENT HARDING recently received Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Dalton of Richmond, Va., aged 78 and 80 years. They were married in Richmond during the Confederate reunion and were visiting in the national capital. The president invited them to call.

Dorothy McClatchie, an 18-year-old schoolgirl of St. Petersburg, Fla., was recently bitten by a giant barracuda, known to Florida fishermen as "the tiger of the sea." She was pulled under by the monster, but came to the surface once and cried for help, but died in a short time.

During his recent stay in India the prince of Wales wore the natty uniform of a colonel of six Indian regiments.

Warren A. Hogel, who recently won a wager of $10,000 by walking from San Francisco to New York on one foot, stopped off in Washington, D. C., and showed people how to make a real hurdle.

The newest type of Wall-street messenger uniform-protector has made its appearance in New York, designed to keep off the robbers who have been taking toll for a long time. The cap and jacket are trimmed with red to make the messenger conspicuous. A steel safety box weighing five pounds is chained to him and in this are kept the money or valuables he carries.

Many children have taken part in getting affairs in readiness for the pilgrimage play, "Life of Christ," which begins in Los Angeles tomorrow. Lucien Frost, one of the disciples, like the other characters in the play, has been bending muscle and skill in preparation. The scenes will be staged in an open-air amphitheater.

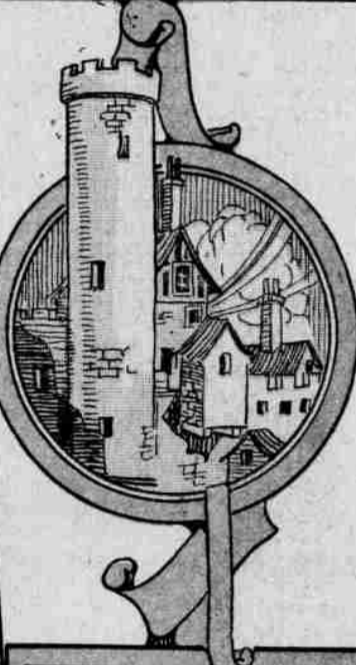

Secretary of War Weeks recently reviewed the cadets of Virginia Military institute at Lexington, Va., and expressed satisfaction at the increasing number of military schools throughout the country.
