Mrs. Wilson's family, the Bollings, was one of the ruling families of Virginia for many years, many of its members having held public office for many years, is the explanation offered for the "flair for politics" that Mrs. Wilson has re-

Virginia Women Aspirants.

Virginia, one of the most aristoratic states of the old south, has produced a large number of active men politicians. In addition to women politicists. In addition to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson there is Mrs. Biair Bannister, sister of Senator Carter Glass, ex-secretary of the treasury under the Wilson regime. She is established at the democratic headquarters in Washington.

Mrs. Westmoreland Davis is act ing as manager for her husband's campaign for the democratic senatorial nomination in Virginia. Davis, an ex-governor, is running against Swanson, the present occupant of the senate seal. It has been facetiously remarked that it is apt to go hard with Senator Swanson because he has no wife to aid him in cause he has no wife to aid him in his campaign. Swanson is a wid-ower. The capital is very much interested in the contest.

Society Bores Delegates.

The young south and the old south differ on several subjects, as was evidenced by the four flappers who attended the last convention of the league of women voters. The four girls, just out of college, comprised Mississippi's delegation to

A. L. Woodard Driving Truck. A. L. Woodard was driver of the county truck. He could not be reached last night for his version of the accident. He was driving to-ward Portland when he came to a horse and wagon being driven by Orell Hunter of the Camas Furni-ture store, Camas, Wash. It was when he turned out to pass this vehicle that the bus speeding up from behind also turned out and was forced off the road.

Dorsey Smith, president of th bus company, asserted last night that all information which he had of the accident indicated that his driver was not to blame.

"The county truck turned out of line without warning, I am told, and to keep from hitting it Burton had to leave the road," asserted Mr. Smith. "The bus driver has been with us all summer and is a good boy with a reputation for cool and careful driving. This is the first accident in which one of our buses has figured in two years."

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, in charge of organization work among democratic women, claims that southern women are going through a great transformation in their attitude toward active participation by women in public life.
