This plan included the colonization of our vast untilled areas. From present conditions it can be assumed that at any time every man may be called to his war post or duty, there to be ready in case his country would need his services, which would make it improbable that any considerable numprobable that any considerable num-ber of persons would come from foreign countries to visit the ex-

"While in New York city I consulted with many persons of authority and high standing relative to the destrability of holding the exposition at this time, and the opinion unanimously given me was adverse. I believe it will be admitted that I as much or more than anyone else, am responsible for bringing the exposition matter before the people of Oregon and was most enthusiastic, but at that time everyone believed that the reparation to be paid by Germany would have been determined and proper provision for its payment would have been made prior to this time, and further, that international complications now ex-While in New York city I con-

This condition at the time I departed was unthinkable. Every one at that time seemed to be optimistic and believed that the world war would be settled and that the trade relationship between the nations would be resumed and consequent rehabilitation would commence with at least reasonable prosperity in its wake and that we would be ready to celebrate a real peace jubiles. This has not occurred.

"On account of my enthusiasm for the exposition it must be known that it is with the deepest regret I make this statement, and I realize that many of the persons loyal to the exposition who are as deeply interested as myself will be greatly disappointed by this report. However, I deem it my duty to make it, and if I did not do so I would be unworthy of the trust reposed in me.

Julius L. Meier, commissioner of the 1925 exposition, who yesterday completed a globe-circling trip to invite the participation of foreign countries, returned home convinced that postponement of the fair project beyond the 1927 date fixed Friday is advisable. Because of a wartorn world Mr. Meier believes the enterprise should await rehabilitation of Europe.

World Declared Sick.

Mr. Meier left Portiand confident and optimistic over the prospects of the city of Portland. This plan, during my absence as I am now informed, has been changed, and it is proposed to have the city bear the $3,000,000 and the business interests of the world in a great exposition. and optimistic over the prospects for interesting the leading countries of the world in a great exposition in Portland in 1925. He confessed he returned a thorough pessimist as to that project under present conditions. He believes the time for waiting has come.

"The world is sick, with a high temperature," he said. "In my opinion, now is not the time to set a definite date for the party."

Changes made in the original plan of financing the exposition since he left Portland last February were not approved by Mr. Meier. He said the state as a whole must participate if the fair is to be the unquiffed success its original sponeors hoped for.

Present Plans Not Approved.

To mend, has been changed, and it is formed, has been changed, and it is proposed to have the city bear the 33,000,000 and the business interests from the original plan that it becomes as one entirely new and to me as unfair and not based upon sound business judgment. It is my belief that for an enterprise the magnitude of this, which is no different from any other business proposition of the state as a whole many participate of the party.

The evident purpose of Mr. Pierce's resolution was to exempt by constitutional provision the taxation of money, notes, credits and accounts. The other exemption—property used for municipal, educational, literary, scientific, religious or charitable purposes, and household furniture and personal effects when used as such—is already in the law and has been for years.
