Matchmaker Hansen Offers Proposal for Fights.

Object of Contests Is to Bring Best Pacific Material Out for Future Competition.

Harry Hansen, matchmaker for the Portland boxing commission, wants to try out a new stunt, which is expected by the commission, will result in developing a lot of new main event material on the Pacific coast.

With at least 14 good feathers on the coast at the present time, Hansen expects other city on the coast in double main events of 16 rounds each.

After the boxers have worked down through the preliminary rounds to the final match between two survivors a belt would be put up by the commission, which would go to the winner of the final clash.

Only 19-round fights in Portland would have any bearing on the title. Any four or six round bouts which the champion might win or lose against other city on the coast would not affect his championship.
