Modern Implements to Exhume Abraham's Native City.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—When work begins October 15 in exploring the dust-buried ruins of the city of Ur, ancestral home of the patriarch Abraham, by a joint expedition of the British museum and the University of Pennsylvania museum, the archaeologists will have to contend with few of the extraordinary difficulties which hitherto have hampered the work of the sort in southern Mesopotamia.

That country is now under a British mandate. Hence the first difficulty—that of sharing the best of the discoveries with the museum in Constantinople—is removed. Then, before the war, virtually everything had to be done by hand. The expedition now on its way will be the first to utilize a complete modern mechanical equipment. Streets once thrown up and buried for three thousand years, will echo the roar of locomotives and motor trucks.

"The expedition will start work under the most favorable auspices," said Dr. G. Gordon, director of the University museum. "Since the British museum is a governmental institution it was a simple matter to obtain equipment. The colonial office gave the utmost co-operation. A military railway and motor lorries have been provided to maintain communication with headquarters of the expedition which will be at Baghdad."

Dr. C. L. Woolley, who has been at work recently on a Hittite site on the upper Euphrates river, has been selected by Dr. Gordon to head the expedition. The British museum having asked him to name a chief, Colonel T. W. Lawrence, a war hero and explorer of international reputation, will be second in command. Colonel Lawrence is credited with winning the Arab tribesmen over to the allies in the world war. He was captured by the Turks and spent two years in a prison camp.

Sidney Smith, a young archaeologist of the British museum staff, will go along to decipher cuneiform texts. John Newton will accompany the expedition as an architectural expert, and Paul Hunter as a representative of the University museum.
