OREGON WINS, 10-0, ON AGGIE ERRORS

Place Kick and Touchdown Made at Start.

TWO-YEAR TIE BROKEN

State Football Championship Is Won; Several Fumbles Are Made by Corvallis Men.

over the crossbar. Oregon 3, Oregon Agricultural college 0.

Another Score Made on Break.

That score was made exactly five minutes after the game started, and on the ninth play. The next Oregon score and the last one came in 11 minutes more by the watch, shortly before the end of the quarter. Again it was on a break.

The ball had gone back and forth, but the turn came when Chapman punted 45 yards from past midfield to the Aggie 10-yard line. Garber, evidently under instructions, let it fall to the ground and roll to a stop without attempting to catch it. Instead of kicking immediately, the Aggies elected to try a running attack. Gill fumbled and was thrown for a two-yard loss, an Oregon man all but getting the ball.

Punt Made Imperative.

They made it imperative for the Aggies to punt, so with the center standing on his eight-yard line, Gill had to stand behind his own goal to kick. He got the pass all right and let drive, but Callison, the tall Oregon center, had broken through and the kick bounded off his outstretched arms and back behind the line where Spears, Oregon left end, made a flying dive and nailed it for a touchdown.

Chapman kicked goal from placement, making the score Oregon 10, Oregon Agricultural college 0.

It was the final Oregon score. The Aggies fumbled several times after that, but none of the breaks were as fatal as those first two and the Oregon attack was never strong enough to smash through the stalwart defense of the orange and black linemen. Once, in the last quarter, it looked for a moment as if another break, a blocked punt again, would give Oregon a touchdown. Von Der Ahe blocked a kick by Gill on the 20-yard line and Spears who, be in remarked, played one whale of a football game, fell on it on the Aggie 10-yard mark.

Needed Punch Is Lacking.

But Oregon couldn't muster quite enough punch—or, to put it another way, the Aggie line was smash proof in the old emergency. King, Chapman and Latham did manage to carry the ball to the two and one-half-yard line on three tries, one of them a six-yard forward pass. But there they ran into an unyielding wall of fighting youths who didn't know what it meant to quit, and got no further. That magnificent last stand held Oregon for downs, and this time Gill punted safely out of danger.

He had to kick from behind his own line, too—did it after the Aggies had tried a running attack from their 2½-yard line and the runner had all but been downed behind his goal for a safety. Then Gill, standing fully ten yards back, his shoulders almost against the spectators, booted as he hadn't booted any other time in the game, a long spiral, followed by a roll that netted 60 yards and sent the battle back into Oregon territory.

The Aggies lost, and they lost to a team that played a better game, but they can write that fighting finish into their memory books and be proud of it.

In the first quarter, a few minutes after the Oregon place kick, King fumbled on the Oregon 39-yard line and Locey of the Aggies recovered, that being almost the only break that went to the Aggies. Two successive offside plays by an overanxious Oregon substitute end gave the Aggies ten yards and first down on the 29-yard line.

Aggie Backs Lose.

But in three smashes the Aggie backs actually lost two yards. So on fourth down Tousey attempted a place kick from the Oregon 44-yard line, but it went wide. That with one exception was the nearest the Aggies ever got to the Oregon goal line. The game was played almost entirely in O. A. C. territory or in midfield. The exception occurred in the second quarter, after Locey's kick had gone wide, when the Aggies, receiving Chapman's punt, began a running attack that took them from midfield to the Oregon 23-yard line, with one Oregon off-side helping, in eight smashes. Two successive first downs were made by Tousey, Miller and Gill, and the Oregon supporters began to worry.

But the rally was stopped by another of those frequent Aggie fumbles. This time it was Tousey who muffed the ball. He did it on the Oregon 26-yard line and the tow-headed Spears was once more the Oregon man of the hour. Spears dived in and got the fumble and Oregon's worries were over for the day.

Chapman Fails in Kick.

Later in the same quarter Chapman made an abortive attempt at a second field goal. This time he tried a kick from the O. A. C. 41-yard line. His thump was true enough, but it fell short.

In the third quarter Chapman tried a third kick from placement, but it was an utter failure. He wasn't able even to get the ball away. A poor pass from the center to the man who was to place the ball was responsible. The pass was high and was fumbled and cost Oregon 12 yards and the ball on downs.

There was only one real breath-snatcher all afternoon. Big Hunk Latham, the Oregon fullback, contributed that one in the third quarter. Garber of the Aggies had made a fair catch of a punt, and Captain Locey elected for a free kick from his 30-yard line. Gill booted it 50 yards to the Oregon 20, where Latham caught it near the side line.

38-Yard Run Is Made.

Behind beautiful interference he crushed and twisted and wrenched his way for a 38-yard run through most of the Aggie team. He might be running yet but for the fact that his flight carried him across the field to the opposite sideline, where he was finally forced out of bounds.

But pretty as the run was, its net gain to Oregon as a scoring play was nothing. Pretty soon the burly Aggie linemen held up the attack again, and the usual punt ensued.

Unable to gain consistently through the Oregon line on straight football, the Aggies pulled a little comedy stuff in this quarter, nothing less than the "lock-step" play that Centre made famous by using against Harvard.

The Aggie linemen placed their hands on each others' shoulders and with an imitation of the celebrated penitentiary one-step, paraded up past the ball, reversed and past it again. The Oregon line followed them. Suddenly one of the Aggie ends seized the ball, flipped it quickly to McKenna and he plunged through a hole for seven yards.

Freak Is Tried Again.

The Aggies tried this freak again a little later, but this time the backfield was in motion that cost a five-yard penalty. A third time they used it and McKenna made a four-yard gain.

Depend on it, though, the lock-step play will not revolutionize football. It's a freak. It looked good once, but tried once, it was easy enough to solve.

Neither team showed much in attack. Oregon made only four first downs from scrimmage and the Aggies three. Oregon gained 146½ yards in scrimmage plays and the Aggies 58. Oregon attempted seven forward passes, of which two were completed for 26 yards net, and the Aggies attempted 14 passes, completed three and netted 13 yards.

Aggies Turn to Passing.

Toward the end of the last quarter the O. A. C. team turned every effort to forward passing, but those passed that did not go wild were intercepted or grounded by the Oregon defensive backs.

Where Oregon excelled today was in returning punts and following the ball, thus getting advantage of the breaks by recovering fumbles and blocking punts. Gill outkicked Chapman, but two of his punts were blocked to none for Chapman and the Oregon quarter more than made up for the shorter distance of his kicks by running back Gill's attempts. He gained 71 yards that way to none for O. A. C. That kind of yardage counts just as much as gains on line smashes.

Today's victory by Oregon was the first for the Webfooters since 1919, when they won by a score of 9 to 0. In 1920 and last year the scores were 0 to 0.

A long wrangle over officials preceded the game. Finally Ted Faulk, formerly of the University of Washington, was agreed upon as referee, William Mulligan of Gonzaga as umpire and E. E. Perkins, University of Chicago, as head linesman.

Then some objection was made and the whole thing was threshed out again. After a long squabble the selection stood and these officials handled the game. The attendance was about 14,000.

INVASION IS MIGHTY ONE

Entire Eugene Student Body Travels to Corvallis Game.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Nov. 18.—(Special.)—The university students effected a mighty invasion of the Beaver camp today when the entire student body boarded the special train or traveled by automobile to Corvallis. The lemon-yellow colors reached the Aggie stronghold at 12:45 P. M. and were immediately organized more than 1600 strong into parade formation for the march to the field. The Oregonians were met by the Oregon Agricultural college band, which followed the Oregon band, both of them leading the line of green and yellow-capped fans.

The arrival of the Oregon rooters at Bell field was greeted by the shrieking Aggie siren. The O. A. C. spectators were already seated in their covered bleachers, the boys adorned in the orange fezzes and the co-eds carrying pale orange balloons. The lemon-yellow swarmed on to the field, lost for the moment as to where to take their places. Then they bolted for the north bleachers like a bunch of wild colts and stormed the temporary structure. There were about a thousand varsity spectators in these orange seats. The Oregon women were given seats in the north end of the Beaver bleachers, and decorated with their yellow chrysanthemums played a pretty contrast to the orange and black on their left.

SCENES CAUGHT AT CORVALLIS YESTERDAY WHEN OREGON BEAT OREGON AGGIES, 10 TO 0.

8 TRAFFIC COPS ON DUTY

Roads Leading to Corvallis Are Watched by State Officers.

SALEM, Or., Nov. 18.—(Special.)—Eight state traffic officers working under the direction of T. A. Raffety, chief inspector for the state motor vehicle department, patrolled the roads leading into Corvallis today. The occasion was the football game between the Oregon Agricultural college and University of Oregon and the annual home-coming of the former institution.

Although thousands of automobiles were pressed into service by the football fans, there was no serious accident during the day. This was the information received at the state traffic department tonight.

BOSTON'S GREAT ART PRODUCT

Mason & Hamlin Pianos

It is impossible to convey in words an adequate idea of the surpassing tonal quality of the Mason & Hamlin Piano.

To say that the piano is made as well as possible, and priced afterward—that does not tell the story. No description of the Tension Resonator can adequately explain its importance in terms of tonal results. Even the marshalled names of artists who have chosen the Mason & Hamlin Piano for their public and private use can only indirectly show its excellence.

And yet, that which is difficult to put into words is a very real thing. If you should play the Mason & Hamlin Piano you would know. Listening to it would tell more than a thousand words, as a glance at the "Woman Weighing Pearls" tells more of Vermeer's artistry than page after page of description.

We invite you to play and hear this extraordinary piano.
