SLAYER OF HERMIT SHOWS NO REMORSE

Youth Declares Intent to Plead Self-Defense.

Francis Vanderzanden, 17, Practices Shooting From Hip to Win Fame in Movies.

HILLSBORO, Or., Dec. 16 .- (Special.)—While officers were searching for him as the suspected slayer of Jacob Dahlnden, "the millionaire of Hayward," Francis Vanderzanden, confessed 17-year-old slayer of the recluse, was fraternizing with William Baker, deputy sheriff of Tillamook county, at Wheeler and sought and obtained the aid of the deputy sheriff in collecting wages due him for five days' work at a Wheeler

On Thanksgiving day, when the bullet-riddled body of the aged re-cluse was found in his lonely shack in the wild country between Man-ning and Banks, the young slayer of the hermit fired many shots from the death gun, practicing "shooting from the hip," preliminary to seek-ing fame as a "two-gun man" in moion pictures.

Youth Armed With Club.

In addition to two revolvers, the youth armed himself with a heavy club before approaching the cabin of the man he killed, despite the fact that he said he intended to ask for nothing but a meal and a little money to help him carry out his plan to run away from home.

These are a few of the highlights in the story of the crime told The Oregonian by the boy slayer today of the crime told the control of the crime told the control of the crime told the cr after a charge of first degree mur-der had been filed against him in the Washington county court by District Attorney Tongue, the charge being based on the signed confes-sion made by young Vanderzanden vesterday. yesterday.

The boy showed little remorse as he told in minute detail of his experiences from the hour he left his farm home until he "broke" under quizzing by Sheriff Alexander yesterday and in the parlance of the underworld which he has glimpsed through jurid fiction admitted "you've got the dope on me." He declared his intention of pleading self defense but added unemotionself defense, but added, unemotionally, "I suppose I'll be sent to the penitentiary because everybody gets sent up when they get in trouble.

Robbery Motive Denied. The boy slayer is not the typical shy 17-year-old farm lad; his speech, punctuated with profanity, is the parlance of the city "street kid." But unlike the "street kid." he talks slowly, haltingly. The effect of the cheap "detective" story and tales of crime, in which he admitted he has steeped his mind is plainly evident.

He steadfastly denied that he steadfastly denied that he "killed Dahenden in an attempt to rob the fermit. "I only intended to ask him for something to eat and a little money," the boy declared. "When he came to the door I asked him for something to eat. He had a shatgun in his hand, but held it back of the door. I could see the butt of it at his feet. He told me to 'get out.' Then I asked him for some money. He raised the gun and told me to get out or he would shoot. I started to back away, and then he pointed the gun at me. I thought he was going to shoot and fired from the hip. The first shot must have hit him in the shoulder, because I saw his right arm jerk. Then I shot again, but couldn't tell whether I had hit him or not, because he slammed the door in my face. The third shot I fired through the door. I guess that was the one that killed him. I would have emptied the gun of all eight shots if my finger hadn't slipped off the trigger."

Investigation that followed the shooting indicated that followed the shooting indicated that a gang of small boys had pestered the vendor for a treat and that he had promised them popcorn after the game if they would go away and quit bothering him. It seemed that he was not prompt about keeping his promise and the lads attempted a raid upon his wagon. He picked up an ancient pistol he had in the wagon and pointed it at the group. The weapon was discharged and young Repp was fatsily shot.

Marko, or "Mike" Piplic in a general fracas and stabbing affray in St. Johns on November 26. Evidence garnered by officers of the law after the fatality showed that Veiheck had been an employe of Pete Miller, with whom he was living. It indicated that Miller owed the accused man money and was attempting to make things so unpleasant he would leave. When Veiheck came to the Miller place the evening of November 26 he was set upon and badly beaten by Miller, Piplic and one Lubini. Before the affray ended Veiheck fatally stubbed Piplic.
