PARLIAMENT OPENED

ED. SPEAKER CRISP'S VIEWS ON 4 English Methods.

SELECTING SUMMER TOWNS.—An interview conducted at New York, Aug. 13, revealed the opinions of the eminent official. Mr. Cranston, president of the American Society for the Propagation of English Methodism, in respect to the selection of summer towns, was asked to state his views. "We have always aimed," he said, "to select towns that are not only picturesque but also convenient for the purpose of attracting visitors. London, for example, is a city of great interest, but it is not one of our summer towns. We prefer to recommend seacoast resorts and the like, where the climate is healthier and the scenery more inspiring." Mr. Cranston went on to say that the selection of summer towns is based on the principles of good hospitality, excellent cuisine, and a variety of outdoor activities. He added that the American Society for the Propagation of English Methodism is always on the lookout for new summer towns that meet these criteria.

NECESSITY OF INTERVENTION.

A Demand for Reform from the Political Press.

The foreign secretary of the United Kingdom, Mr. Chamberlain, recently expressed his views on the necessity of intervention in foreign affairs. "We cannot afford to stand by and watch the consequences of political unrest," he said. "We must take action to prevent the spread of radical ideas and to ensure the stability of governments." Mr. Chamberlain emphasized the importance of international cooperation in maintaining peace and security. He called for a strengthening of the League of Nations, which he believes can play a crucial role in preventing wars and conflicts.

PARLIAMENT OPENED

ED. SPEAKER CRISP'S VIEWS ON 4 English Methods.

SELECTING SUMMER TOWNS.—An interview conducted at New York, Aug. 13, revealed the opinions of the eminent official. Mr. Cranston, president of the American Society for the Propagation of English Methodism, in respect to the selection of summer towns, was asked to state his views. "We have always aimed," he said, "to select towns that are not only picturesque but also convenient for the purpose of attracting visitors. London, for example, is a city of great interest, but it is not one of our summer towns. We prefer to recommend seacoast resorts and the like, where the climate is healthier and the scenery more inspiring." Mr. Cranston went on to say that the selection of summer towns is based on the principles of good hospitality, excellent cuisine, and a variety of outdoor activities. He added that the American Society for the Propagation of English Methodism is always on the lookout for new summer towns that meet these criteria.

NECESSITY OF INTERVENTION.

A Demand for Reform from the Political Press.

The foreign secretary of the United Kingdom, Mr. Chamberlain, recently expressed his views on the necessity of intervention in foreign affairs. "We cannot afford to stand by and watch the consequences of political unrest," he said. "We must take action to prevent the spread of radical ideas and to ensure the stability of governments." Mr. Chamberlain emphasized the importance of international cooperation in maintaining peace and security. He called for a strengthening of the League of Nations, which he believes can play a crucial role in preventing wars and conflicts.