THE HATCHET'S CONSISTENCY

The benign and sacerdotal publisher of The Hatchet, the Hermann "Organ," in his last issue, because a thing of the past. THE ARGUS had commented upon the inconsistency in that particular paper, saw fit to bury THE ARGUSIN an avalanche of satire, even going so far as to accuse us of populism. If free coinage of silver, the American product, constitutes populism, then THE ARGUS has a "populist glow," and The Hatchet, which is and has been free and unlin ited, "16 to 1," is in the white heat of populism.

There are two kinds of consistency. One is from principle, the other from prejudice. If THE ARgus ever intimated that any one lied it stood ready to prove the intimation or assertion. If THE ARgus has used invective, it was called for and used in the relation that the "exception proves the rule. The Hatchet is not consistent to itself or its friends, laying aside its inconsistency to principles, and its "slogan" will not rally such supcourse will be eagerly watched by those interested in the coming campaign. The Oregonian has read free silver from the republican party lative halls who will first consider and the state platform will be antagonistic to that quantity. The Hatchet, will be consistent with its past policy of consistency and enctive tariff are constitutional oposites, so the Hatchet is not consistent. The learned editor further mentions "crumbs" which THE ARGUS gets from the Sheriff's office (THE Augus has published 3 or 4 Sheriff's sales in 16 months) and seems to feel grieved. THE ARGUS did not blackmail the Sheriff into this patronage. It was from democratic clientage. THE ARGUS further has the county printing but this the priestly young journalist forgot to mention. This paper is the only democratic paper in Washington county, The Times being self-admitted, and so advertised, independent. As to the policy of The Times' political utterances, this paper is yet under the impression that its "judgment in politics is week." The Hatchet is consistent in one thing Max Burgholzer passed through the at least, and that is unisrepresent. City on Tuesday enroute for Portland. Hatchet is consistent in one thing ation and in another - but that is not this story.
