Two Kinds of Heroism.
No one is irretrievably lost in whom the sense of honor survives. A Paris paper recounts the case of a woman who had been arrested, convicted of some offense, and sentenced to imprisonment. A detective was taking her to the prefecture from Boulevard-sur-Seine, by steamer, when at the Concorde bridge a well-dressed man threw himself into the river and was drowning before their eyes.

The officer was a brave man and an excellent swimmer; it cost him a struggle to see a life lost which he might save, if he were free to act.

"If I were alone," he exclaimed, "I would save that man."

"Save him," said the woman. "I will wait for you at the pier."

The officer hesitated for an instant, and then plunged into the water. He had barely seized the drowning man when a boat struck him violently, and he lost his grip. He drifted again, but vainly, and at last, quite exhausted, was pulled into a small boat, which itself narrowly escaped collision with a steamer.

The heroic officer was cheered by the crowd who had witnessed his bravery, and the body of the man he had striven to save was recovered later. But his was not the only honorable conduct shown, for on the pier the woman, true to her word, was waiting for the detective, and handed him his coat, in the pocket of which was the warrant upon which she had been arrested.

One is glad to learn that her honorable conduct will not go unappreciated. When it was reported to the chief of the department he immediately ordered the prisoner to be released in recognition of her humanity and honor.

Boiler Scale.
A very novel method of getting rid of scale in a boiler is credited by a Boston paper to an engineer in that city. The scale came from the use of well water. The feed pipe enters the front of the boiler just about the water line, and has slots cut in it about an eighth of an inch wide, instead of the ordinary spraying method of distributing the water, and surrounding the feed pipes is a larger pipe, about 6 inches in diameter and cut away at the top; the feed water enters the boiler and discharges through the slots in the feed pipe, depositing all the foreign matter in the water into this catch pipe instead of into the boiler—the success of the plan depending upon having a high temperature of feed at about the boiling point, when the solids held in suspension or solution in water will be deposited.

A paragraph which will appeal with much force to all men who go to the theaters is one in a recent number of Life, in which that journal remarks that it observes with consternation that the large hats are coming in again in the theaters. Life closes with these bitter remarks: "It is not too much to say that the height of the hat which a woman wears on her head in the theater is in inverse proportion to her breeding, and, as a rule, to her respectability. The women who wear the biggest and most offensive hats, and refuse to take them off, are commonly dames who, from disastrous personal experience, have become hardened in indifference to public opinion."

DRIVEN FROM THE CITADEL.

The warmth of spring and summer may do much to relax the muscular system and make many feel much more comfortable, but there is about the old enemy rheumatism, that when he once takes hold, he tries to hold the citadel all seasons of the year. But whether this arch enemy lurks in the muscles, joints, bones or the nerves, he is such an enemy to human happiness that he must be driven out of any stronghold. It was planned long ago to do this, and St. Jacobs Oil as a knight in battle has scored wonderful victories. At all times he is ready to overcome and conquer this fiend of pain, and does it as surely and certainly as knights of old expelled the Saracens. No one should be deceived by the mild weather of spring to trifle with it either in chronic or transient form. Use the great remedy for pain and get rid of it at once and for all.

"Bigs thinks he's getting fat." "Isn't he?" "No; the laundry is only shrinking his hands."

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement; and tends to personal enjoyment, when rightly used. The many who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers, and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

PEAK BELL RINGERS.

They Entertained the Public Many Years Ago.

Not many people are aware that in the house at 354 South First street is living a bright, entertaining old man, who for forty years won popularity and fame among music-loving people in the United States and Canada as the head of the Peak family of Swiss bell-ringers, says the Brooklyn Eagle. His eighty-eight years weigh lightly upon his shoulders, for in general health and activity he is the peer of many a man nearly two-score years his junior, and his touch on the keys of the piano and organ is delightfully graceful and true.

Indeed, it may be said that William M. Peak is thoroughly enjoying his ripe old age in that happy musical atmosphere which always buoyed him up through life, and which still seems to fill all his recollections of the past and thoughts of the present with the spirit of melody.

"I must tell you," resumed Mr. Peak, "how I came to organize my family into a troupe of Swiss bell-ringers. It was in the early fifties, and all my children were able to perform well on the harp and other musical instruments, while my wife had gained fame everywhere with her soprano voice. You see we were a thoroughly musical family, some of my children having appeared in public when they were only 3 or 4 years old. Well, Barnum had just brought out some bell-ringers from Switzerland, and I saw and heard them at his American museum in New York. From that moment I was enthusiastic over Swiss bell-ringing, and, importing my own bells from Switzerland, I organized the family troupe, which gained almost instantaneous popularity and distinction.

"We had other musical features, of course, but the bells were our chief features. Sometimes we had fifteen or seventeen persons in the troupe. My family consisted of seven—namely, my wife, myself, and my five children, William, Edward, Julia, Fanny, and Loretta. My wife and Loretta are dead. William is in the West in company with his brother Edward. Julia is in Boston and Fanny is in Milwaukee. All my living children are still professional and successful musicians. My own work is done, except that I still play a little for my own entertainment, and once in a while for old friends. We often played in Brooklyn twenty years ago and more, both at this end of the town and down by the city hall, and at the Athenaeum on Atlantic avenue. One of the places we played in here is now the Novelty Theater, but in the old days it was a public hall, known first as the Odeon and afterward as the Apollo rooms. When I came here over ten years ago I became greatly attached to the Rev. Dr. Almon Gunnison, then the pastor of All Souls' Universalist Church, and I am a member of that church to-day. I am glad to let my friends know that I am not broken down or feeble."

YOU MUST SAY "FIERCE."

Latest Slang, and It Applies to Everything and Everybody.

It is now about time for the outlying region of the English language, known as slang, to recognize a newcomer within its vagrant boundaries. The recruit of slang is the word "fierce." The word in its extended field of usefulness is young, but it has gained a firm hold in New York and Brooklyn.

In order to be up to the times, we must no longer talk of a heavy rain, but of a fierce rain. A blizzard is a fierce snowstorm. A keen wind is a fierce one, and so is a boisterous. When a man has a pronounced attack of drunkenness, it is a fierce jag. A winner of poker has played a fierce game. A desperate misfortune is fierce. A great stroke of good luck is fierce. The enforcement of the excise law is fierce. It is fierce to be married, twins in the family are fierce, and its fierce to die, whether naturally or by accident.

A President's proclamation or message is fierce. Anything that is extravagant is fierce. Anything that is exceedingly mild is fierce. An extra liberal crop of cotton or of corn is fierce, and so (such is the elasticity of the word) is an extra poor one. To have a toothache is fierce, and to receive an unexpected legacy is fierce. Hard times are fierce. So are prosperous times. We must no longer say of a misfortune or of an unexpected announcement: "It broke me all up," but "It was fierce."

That the ferocity of all human events, grave or gay, lively or severe, should at least be recognized, is a tribute to the growing, or should we say fierce, intelligence of the English-speaking portion of the fierce population of this fierce world.

Possibilities of the Ray.

It has long been known that sunlight is a potent destroyer of noxious germs, and the general belief is that it is the actinic rays that chiefly have such action. Now, if the X rays are merely the invisible ultra-violet rays of the spectrum, they are probably the most active of all. Indeed, that is indicated by their effect upon photographic plates. That they may prove to be powerful germicide agents, and it may be useful only to pass them through the human body to destroy all the noxious bacteria in the most remote and inaccessible tissues. Of course, that is mere speculation. But in these days it is rash to say anything is impossible.—New York Tribune.

Trolley Does Not Kill All.

The street railways of Massachusetts, nearly all of which are operated by electricity, carried 200,000,000 passengers last year, of whom 1,507 were injured, twenty-five fatally.

A woman who never marries misses the greatest opportunity of her life to be a martyr.

UNCLE SAM'S BONDS.

HOW THE VALUABLE PIECES OF PAPER ARE MADE.

The New Issue Will Be a Duplicate of the Issue of Last Year—A Real Artist as Designer—Various Steps in the Process of Turning Them Out.

The way in which United States bonds are designed, engraved and made ready to be turned over to the investor in return for his gold coin or its equivalent is one of the most interesting parts of the workings of the treasury department branch of the national government. The coming bond issue will not be what is technically known as a new issue, but will be a duplication of the issue of February, 1895.

The designer of the plates is a well known New York artist who enjoys high reputation as a magazine and book illustrator. This is Mr. Will H. Low, and for the past year he has been the star man of the corps of artists attached to the treasury department. In addition to the work of drafting the design for the bonds he has designed several schemes for currency.

After the announcement of a bond issue the secretary calls in the chief of the department of engraving and printing and tells him the denominations to be issued. These may be in coupon bonds of $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. The same denominations may be issued in registered bonds, with the addition of others of a higher face value. The additional ones are for $5,000, $10,000, $50,000 and $50,000. The issues of the two latter denominations have been very small.

After the chief has received his instructions he turns the matter over to the artist, who at once designs the plate. It is an erroneous impression that for every issue a new series of plates is engraved. The artist may use any one of a number of vignette likenesses of historical Americans, and he mortifies it into the drawing.

When completed, it is submitted to the chief for his approval and then to the secretary of the treasury. If the design is all right, it is turned over to the engravers.

This usually requires from a month to six weeks. The engraving is done on a thin sheet of soft steel of a thickness of an eighth of an inch. By a secret process the metal is hardened when finished, and a proof is taken, which is submitted to the chief of the bureau. This proof of them must be approved.

The plate then goes to the printer and the work of turning off the bonds begins. The bonds are printed on the same kind of paper as that used for currency, and each impression is carefully watched. If any imperfection renders a copy worthless, it is destroyed by the officials, after being returned from the press-rooms. But for each sheet of bond paper taken out there must be returned a similar number of copies, either perfect or otherwise. After the work of printing is done the securities are counted and checked off and are then made ready for delivery to the purchaser. When their final destination is determined upon, an employee of the department, accompanied by an escort, takes charge of the bonds and delivers them to the purchaser. In the last issue Mr. Logan Carlisle, son of the secretary, had charge of the deliverance of the securities.

The difference between the two classes of bonds—coupon and registered—is great. The former are like currency, payable to the bearer, and no record of their transfer is ever made. The interest coupons may be collected by anyone who presents them at a national bank or treasury.

The registered bonds are safer in case of burglary, as they are absolutely nonnegotiable except by the signature of the holder as evidenced by the books of the treasury department at Washington. When registered bonds are sold, the name of the purchaser is placed in a book kept for the purpose. There are no interest coupons attached, but each quarter a check is mailed from Washington for the accumulated interest, which is payable at any treasury.

Should the holder desire to sell his registered bonds, the transfer must take place before some official of the treasury department or an officer of a national bank. The fact of the sale is then forwarded to Washington and the necessary alterations made in the registered bond book.

Although the face design of a government bond is less intricate and puzzling than the designs used on currency, efforts to counterfeit them have been rare. The noted forger, Brockway, was the author of the last bogus government bond issue that was detected. It was a duplication of a coupon bond of the issue of 1861, the first of the war loans, which matured in 1881. The denomination was $1,000. The work was poorly executed and its worthlessness was soon detected. It was for this that Brockway served his longest term in the penitentiary.—New York World.

AUSTRALASIA TO COLUMBIA.

The Antipodeans Ask Us to Clasp Hands With Them for Freedom.

Mr. Frederick Graham, who is understood to be connected with the British colonial office, has sent the following cable message to the United States:

AUSTRALASIA TO HER SISTER COLUMBIA.

Columbia, thou firstborn child, Sprung from the same dear motherland, When, under rule not just or mild, Compell'd for liberty to stand,

'Twas that stern lesson serv'd to save The future of our common race, Therefore she gave to each new babe The widest freedom on earth's space.

And you may roam the world around, From pole to pole and clime to clime, True liberty is only found With that dear tongue of thine and mine.

The blood of heroes that we share Was shed in floods to keep us free, Let us unite, and who shall dare To threaten the freedom of the sea?

For us, if we must stand alone, Our strongest strength in men we'll find, And perish with the island home Of Freedom, if we can't defend.

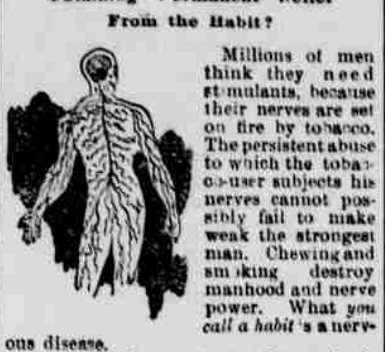

On earth's best vantage spots we stand; No other ports to us are free, Come, clasp with us our mother's hand, And join our guardship of the sea.

What is lovely never dies, but passes into other loveliness—star dust or sea foam, fower or winged air. If this befalls our poor, unworthy flesh, think that what destiny awaits the soul, what glorious vesture it shall wear at last.—Aldrich.

TABACCO-TWISTED NERVES.

The Unavoidable Result of the Continued Use of Tobacco.

Is There a Sure, Easy and Quick Way of Obtaining Permanent Relief From the Habit?

Millions of men think they need stimulants, because their nerves are set on fire by tobacco. The persistent abuse to which the tobacco-user subjects his nerves cannot possibly fail to make weak the strongest man. Chewing and smoking destroy manhood and nerve power. What you call a habit is a nervous disease.

Tobacco, in the majority of cases deadens the feelings. You may not think tobacco hurts you, but how are you ever going to tell how much better you would feel without it, unless you follow the advice of Postmaster Holbrook:

CURED 49 CASES OUT OF 50.
HOLBROOK, N. Y., JUNE 12, 1895.—The effects of No-To-Bac are truly wonderful. I had used tobacco for forty-three years, a pound plug a week. I used two boxes of No-To-Bac and had no desire for tobacco since. I gave two boxes of No-To-Bac to a man named West, who had used tobacco for forty-seven years, and two boxes to Mr. Williams, and neither of them have used tobacco since, and say they have no desire for it. Over fifty that I know of have had No-To-Bac through my influence, and I only know of one case where it did not cure, and that was the fault of the patient.

I was in your ad last week. I have gained seventeen pounds in flesh since I quit the use of tobacco. You can use this letter as proof of it, as you wish.

Yours respectfully,
C. E. HOLBROOK, P. M.

THE UNKINDEST CUT OF ALL.

As Shakespeare says, it is to poke fun or sneer at people, and to make merry and jest with them, that their complaint is imaginary or an affection. It is neither, but a serious reality. Impaired digestion and assimilation of the food is a very common cause of nervousness, especially that distressing form of it which manifests itself in want of sleep, Hoopler's Stomach Bitters speedily remedies nervousness, as it also does malaria, kidney, bilious and rheumatic ailments. The weak gain vigor through its use.

CONSUMPTION CURED

AN ABSOLUTE REMEDY FOR ALL PULMONARY COMPLAINTS.

T. A. Slocum offers to Send Two Bottles Free of His Remedy to Cure Consumption and All Lung Troubles.—An Effair of Life.

Nothing could be fairer, more philanthropic or carry more joy in its wake than the offer of T. A. Slocum, M. C., of 183 Pear Street, New York. Perfectly confident that he has an absolute remedy for the cure of consumption and all pulmonary complaints, he offers through this paper to send two bottles free to any reader who is suffering from lung trouble or consumption, also loss of flesh and all conditions of wasting. He invites those desirous of obtaining this remedy to send their express and postoffice address, and to receive in return the two bottles free, which will arrest the approach of death. Already this remedy, by its timely use, has permanently cured thousands of cases who were given up, and death looked upon as an early visitation.

Knowing his remedy as he does, and being so positive of its beneficent results, Dr. Slocum considers it his religious duty, a duty which he owes to humanity, to donate his infallible remedy where it will assault the enemy in its citadel, and, by its instant potency, stay the current of disintegration, bringing joy to those whose which the shadow of the grave has been gradually growing more strongly defined, causing fond hearts to grieve. The cheapness of the remedy—offered nearly apart from its inherent strength, is enough to commend it, and more so is the perfect confidence of the great chemist making the offer, who holds out life to those already becoming emaciated, and says: "Be cured."

The invitation is certainly worthy of the consideration of the afflicted, who for years, have been taking nauseous tonics without effect; who have ostracized themselves from home and friends to live in more salubrious climates, where the atmosphere is congenial to weakness, and who have fought against death with all the weapons and strength in their hands. There will be no mistake in sending for these bottles, for the mistake will be in passing the invitation by.

They Are Professional Guests.

Some gentlemen of family who are clever at story, just and reputable are following a strange business in London. There is a man there who furnishes amusement and entertainment for all kinds of social gatherings, having men of family on his staff, who in the guise of guests manage to insure an enjoyable evening for the invited guests, and thus set the anxiety of the hostess, fearing a dull time for her guests, at rest. A couple of guineas will engage the services of a person of "good social attainments," who will so exercise his art of entertaining others as to put everybody at once into the brightest of spirits. Five guineas will command the services of an individual of "higher standing in the social scale," while the proportionately large outlay of $50 will secure those of a gentleman with a handle to his name.

Mr. Gladstone and British Guiana.

Mr. Gladstone has a personal connection with British Guiana, as his family fortune was made there. His father owned a great sugar estate at Vreeden Hoop, in Demerara, and was a large owner. One of the Grand Old Man's first speeches in parliament was a defense of West Indian slavery, made just before the passage of the act abolishing slavery in 1833. He was undersecretary for the colonies when Schonburgk was laying out his line.

"It is but just to write about my daughter Cora, aged 19. She was completely run down, declining, had that tired feeling, and friends said she would not live over three months. She had a bad
