TELL IT NOT IN GATH!

The Independent will bear in mind that the democratic ticket needs no defense. It is American, it is the voice of the people, and asks for protection which is protection. It is opposed to the gold standard system of contraction about which Editor Gault, in 1895, said:

"But if there is to be no choice except the two extremes, if they must submit to the policy of the present administration and sustained by papers like the Oregonian, a policy that means the spoilation of hundreds of thousands for the benefit of the few, a large majority of these people will be reconciled to free and unlimited coinage of the world's silver at the ratio of sixteen to one."

The [illegible] edi- [illegible] then right. [illegible] wonder the Independent [illegible] apologize for the republican platform? If he were truckling to the free silver votes in the legislature, at that time, does it make matters better? Does it not condemn him the more? The Independent then spoke the truth and the condemnation of the gold standard is in terms unmistakeable. Brother Gault is a good fellow, but he must be like the fellow who says "My party is my God and wherever its banner am I," for he now pleads for, and seeks to defend that which he knows to be, and has declared as false political economy.

The Independent says it never contained a line supporting unlimited coinage of silver. If the above lines do not plainly state that unlimited coinage is far better than the gold standard then is construction of the English language in vain. The Independent further contended, at one time, that it would be patriotic for populists in the last legislature to vote for a free coinage man! Gault was all right, but his party has followed the leadership and dictation of interests opposed to the rank and file of common people, and now he "cuckoos" and is gone wrong.

CAN ENGLAND MEASURE BOTH THE DOLLAR AND THE HAY-RACK.

England built up a great nation by traffic. By conquest and taxation of colonial possessions and by brute force she built up a manfacturing people. By taxing directly and indirectly she supports a royalty, the expense of which puts even American profligacy to shame. By capitalistic influence she has dictated the money standard of every nation and assisted in keeping down a decent volume of money, whenever and wherever she could. This she has done because it is to her interest to do so. Farm products are and always have been higher in England than anywhere else, because the demands of a local population were much greater than the local supply. Therefore, she has kept the price down as much as possible by keeping down a proper volume of currency in her own country and in such other countries as her influence could be felt so that her interest money would buy the more commodities. No one with national pride in England denies her the right to do this, but the question now paramount to the American people is whether we shall continue to grant England the right to dictate the size and capacity of the Reed "hayracks" which carry to England our product while she is at the same time dictating the size of our dollar.

A REPUBLICAN MEASURE.

History speaks for itself. The democratic party has no necessity to defend its plank for an income tax. A republican congress passed just such a law in 1863, and nearly 20 millions per annum were collected under its provisions, entailing but about two per centum for its collection. Here was a time when legislators knew what the shield of government to the rich and powerful was worth. No one then disputed its validity or its justice. The rich were then, so far as law was concerned, considered just as were the poor. Now these counterfeit apostles of Lincoln like the Oregonian declare the measure advocated as anarchistic. THE ARGUS disputes this and unhesitatingly declares it to be democratic and of the people. It was constitutional when capitalistic influence had not perverted the mind of the judicial tribunal, but it is different now. No one in the '60's would have dared to have brought the measure to supreme court test. Let us have the income tax and if a court again decides it unconstitutional let it be made a part of the constitution. Without the producer or laborer, incomes would be of no value. When the results of labor and produce make great incomes let the holders of such pay a just share for national government.

WAS MR. HUDSON "FUNNIN?"

Hon. Harvey S. Hudson, our representative from Gaston, is a prince of good fellows and always means to be right on any question. But, February 1, 1895, our friend sarcastically thought something was wrong when congress demonetized silver in 1873, inasmuch as the silver dollar was then commercially worth $1.04 in gold. Now, our friend H. S. suddenly [illegible]covers that bi-metallism can [illegible] sustained by maintaining [illegible] standard. Harvey, THE ARGUS [illegible] but don't tell us you were [illegible] "funnin" when you wrote th[illegible] appeared in the [illegible] [illegible]ary 1. 1895.

FOR THE HATCH[illegible]

Those republican newspa[illegible] who have been so indiscreet [illegible] shouting for free and unlimited coinage of silver will have to enjoy a bountiful banquet of crow after the next republican national nominating convention. This will go hard with them as they are not inured to such diet. Now, were it the democrats, it would be all right. A democrat has feasted so many times at the fes al board wherein crow was the chiefest dish, that the viand has almost became a dainty, yes, even a delicacy.—ARGUS, May 23, 1895. (Over one year prior the St. Louis Republican Convention. Hatchet man please N. B.)

CARLISLE BECOMES WISE.

In 1878, Secretary of Treasury Carlisle said: "According to my view of the subject, the conspiracy which seems to have been formed in this country and Europe to destroy by legislation or otherwise one half of the metallic money of the world is the most gigantic crime of this or any other age. The consummation of such a scheme would ultimately entail more misery on the human race than any war, pestilence and famine that ever occurred."

Mr. Carlisle is now wise and in no way agrees with himself of 1878. He was no "boy" at that time.

IT is easily understood why the corporations, trusts and combines, national bankers, etc., are supporting the gold standard. They who have annuities and incomes do so from purely business purposes, for they know it will mean more produce and products of labor for their income. But to the man who has several thousands dollars tied up in farm, it is different. Such a condition simply means that they must give more of their production for the dollar with which they pay their tax. As THE ARGUS has before repeatedly said, it is not a political matter, but a simple business proposition. The laborer stands in the same relation to this matter. Free coinage of gold and silver would mean ceaseless turning of factory wheels, a general revival of business, a demand for labor and a demand for wheat, meat and cotton. No one should blame the moneyed people for voting their betterment, but the farmer and laborer in turn should and will vote for their own interest which are not in the gold standard.

THE Independent thinks free coinage of silver would be for the interest of foreign capitalists—that is, it says it will—and it further says the American voter will not vote for issues of bonds in time of peace. Right you are, Independent! He will vote to put a stop to the "parity" business which has cost the government millions of dollars, and to stop this, he will not vote for the gold standard candidate. Bless your heart, Independent, but you are not right on this tariff business with which you so tickle your mentality The "foreigner pays the tax!" Well, well, Brother Independent, you should have read brother Hanna's statement of the tariff idea. The foreigner pays the tax! Ha, Ha! THE foreigner pays the interest on all bonds and obligations—you might as well say. Come, come, Independent, you know better than that. So do the people.

No less a veteran than John Sherman himself, in a speech at Cleveland, Ohio, Saturday last, in apologizing for the gold standard platform, acknowledged the laws of supply and demand as relative to falling prices. "Honest John," in doing this, acknowledges that, the demand for money being more than adequate to the supply by reason of a gold standard, a larger supply of money is needed. The veteran republican also acknowledged, tacitly, that the use of anything gives its value. Even the Oregonian rather apologizes for his speech. Bryan should endeavor to keep Sherman on the stump. It will be easy, in this way to elect a ticket which advocates a larger volume of money and greater use of silver.

IN the issue of August 6th THE ARGUS gave the following as "Sherman in 1896." "Pile on your distress. I am no common jay of a farmer. I'm fixed. Let her rip. It pays to represent your people in Congress." The able editor of our republican contemporary takes exception to this. Well, well, brother, he supports the gold stand[illegible]. In 1895 you said this syste[illegible] [illegible] "the spoilation of hundreds [illegible] for the benefit of the [illegible] above, then, good Sherm[illegible]

IF, as the In[illegible] the populists did not tu[illegible] the democratic candid[illegible] good evidence [from [illegible] about one-third the p[illegible] many towns turned ou[illegible] a good many republicans must have came out to see Mr. Bryan on his eastward trip. The Independent should have all its glee at the present time, for it will have four years more from next November in which to howl 'blue ruin."

MANY republicans assert that "the foreigner pays the tax." Well, if these conditions continue for a few years more England will pay all our taxes. It is history, however, that the "Boston tea party" did not believe the foreigner paid the tax. Another tea party will be held this November and when Bryan takes the chair next spring all tories will be expected to lament.

WELL, well, suppose those bonds are payable in coin and the Bryan administration should pay them in silver? Wouldn't Uncle Sam get that silver back again in duties at par, and as Uncle Sam accepts it as dollar for dollar with gold, wouldn't this condition, from a republican standpoint, be all right? Have they not for years contended that the "foreigners pay the tax?"

THE Independent thinks the repeal of the "Corn Law" ruined British farmers. This certainly is refreshing! This is too ridiculous to need analysis. The next thing we know the Independent will be claiming that 26 years of unexampled prosperity ruined the farmers of the United States.

A HISTORIAN ON SILVER

What John Ridpath says about Free Silver.

Dr. John Ridpath, the eminent American historian and a resident of Indiana in a recent interview espouses free silver. In a dispatch in the San Francisco Chronicle, a free silver paper which turned face after the first St. Louis convention and is now supporting the gold standard, Ridpath is quoted as saying.

"The silver dollar was from of old the unit of money and accounts in the United States. That dollar to this hour has never been altered by the fraction of a grain in the quantity of pure metal composing it. Every other coin, whether of gold or of silver, has been altered time and again, but the silver unit never." He continues with the statement that the law originally providing for the coinage of gold expressly measures its value in silver dollars. He declares that if silver is admitted to unrestricted coinage and the option is given the debtor to pay in money of either metal, the parity between gold and silver will immediately established.
