

TOMBSTONES FOR OUR DEPARTED VETERANS

Are Received by Quarter-Master McCulloch.

FOR BOWEN, ANNANS, STURDEVANT

The Gift of the Government for its Defenders of the Sixties.

Very few people know that the government provides monuments to mark the graves of its dead defenders, yet such is the case.

"Be it enacted, etc., that the secretary of war is hereby authorized to erect headstones over the graves of soldiers who served in the regular and volunteer army of the United States during the war for the Union and who have been buried in private village or cemeteries."

Friday evening last, Quarter Master Jas. McCulloch, of General Ransom Post, received three monuments for the graves of three veterans who have died within the last year.

W. W. Annans, Hillsboro, of Co. I, ninth Iowa cavalry; Chas. E. Bowen, Hillsboro, Co. K, twenty-second Iowa infantry; and E. B. Sturdevant, Cornelius, Co. B, fifty-third Pennsylvania infantry.

The headstones are laid down at the delivery point at the expense of the government.

It looks as though, however unintentionally, there is some inclination to petting and evade on this proposition of so sudden a switch.

The recent elections demonstrate clearly to the acceptance of bimetalism in places not expected.

We gained to the extent of nearly getting the national house; and everywhere except where foreign and unfamiliar issues were injected into a campaign; gains in the Spanish war, yet unmentioned, were charges by the press and speakers binders that Spain wished for ever success; gains in spite of history pointing to the fact that an administration never before lost any strength under war.

Such a thing is unparalleled, as Mr. Huston well knows. Bimetallists of all political faiths get consolation from these gains. If Mr. Huston get any consolation, he is much easier to satisfy than his many and strenuous complaints would cause one to infer.

THRIVING CORNELIUS IN PRINT AS IT IS

Business Increasing and the City out of Debt.

STREETS LIGHTED BY GOOD LAMPS

A Write-up of the Little City Between Hillsboro and Forest Grove.

Cornelius, Nov. 24.—Cornelius is booming—not necessarily because it is one of the banner silver precincts in Washington county, but because it naturally can't help it. Cornelius is situated on the base line, 24 miles west of Portland. Its population is about 400. The city is the only one in the county having no debts, and money in the treasury. The Southern Pacific railroad is its transportation line, with A. G. Lucas as agent.

There are four general merchandise stores, those of C. C. Hancock, Fred Matthies and O. M. Godfrey on the north of base line street and Lawrence Bailey's on the south; two real estate offices, conducted by J. H. Cornelius and A. A. Phillips, respectively. Cooper Branaman is the barber. Mrs. S. E. Montgomery is postmistress. Its two blacksmiths are A. S. Hatch and L. G. Weidewitsch and the livery is run by Albert Bunning. There is a good public hall, owned by C. W. Hendrix. J. R. Miller is the popular landlord of the St. Joseph Hotel. Dr. A. Stanlee represents the medical profession. Lawrence Bailey operates the best equipped cider mill in the county.

A Methodist church looks after salvation, while two saloons supply liquid refreshments to those who are not affairs celestial. A splendid school is conducted, with two teachers employed. The greatest improvement for Cornelius, however, is the new and modern flouring mill, recently built by Apin Bros. This mill is what Cornelius has needed for years and years and the town already feels its effect by the increased volume of trade occasioned by the mill making it a grain center.

The K. of P. lodge is the real social life of the city and its members number the prominent men. Cornelius is all right. Just keep your eye on Cornelius! There are two public telephone stations and street lamps light the evening rambler. The present city officers are: Mayor, A. S. Briggs; councilmen, Thos. Talbot, G. Vickers, T. H. Miller, J. B. Merrill; recorder, M. H. Henderson; treasurer, R. A. Clark; marshal, Albert Bunning.
