WHY IMPERIALISM.

It is easy of comprehension why our wealthy-in-money citizens are almost a unit for imperialism upon lines as exercised by Great Britain, and why they want a large standing army. Great economic changes are taking place, and this class of citizenship are always looking out, in a business way, for the future. They are prudent, cautious and far seeing. Unlike the producer and laborer, who live almost entirely in the today, these live in the future as well. Observant, and well understanding the laws of trade, the averages between money and property, and being ever on the alert for that which is their betterment, they advocate that policy which will insure to them a profit, regardless of profit for others. So it is, they see in all lines of production a gradual slump from the profitable prices once enjoyed and they see no return for investments in farm mortgages, unless there is a weakening in the purchasing power of the dollar,—the very thing they least desire—paradoxical, perhaps, yet true! So they want more national securities in which to invest, more debt, and to get it, they want more armament, more soldiery, more expense, more official services—and more bonds.

The proof of this tendency is abundant in the fact that the most earnest advocates of expansion and imperialism are publishers of the great papers in thorough touch with the great credit combinations and by the fact that the Depews, the Hannas, the Elkins, are all in favor of the imperial policy. It is simply a question of the dollar, its power; and the desire to cheapen and keep cheap, that which our producers have to sell.

RECOGNIZE OUR DEFENDERS.

The Argus last week opened the campaign advocating the states of Washington and Oregon pensioing the Indian war veterans. Let the press of the state get together on this proposition and the next Oregon legislature will do its duty toward these old veteran defenders. It will be a pusher on Congress and if that body does not see fit to reimburse the state, well and good. If the candidacy of all parties shall in all probability stand upon this sentiment; or if the press shall present a solid front for this recognition of the frontier service and defense, it may have—i. will have, an overwhelming influence on the next Congressional body. As a matter of taxation, it will be very slight, and as a matter of justice, no one is there who can, or will object.

THE committee investigating the embalmed beef question can make but one report, if all evidence is given its proper place in consideration. The evident intention from start to finish, however, to throw Miles into disrepute, leaves one in doubt as to what the true character of the report of the committee will be. More than likely the report will be kept back for several months until public indignation is allayed and then we shall hear that "the evidence was conflicting, etc." Secretary Alger will hardly allow his high office to be made a football by those who are opposing him within his own political household. That there was a rotten mess in the commissary department goes without saying, but modern politics will reason that a little whitewash will cover a multitude of swindles.

THIRTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.

Dispatch Copied from Miners' Register (Col.) April 16, 1865.

C. Burnham sends The Argus a copy of the Miner's Register, (Col.) dated April 16, 1865, from which a despatch relative to Lincoln's assassination follows:

"President Lincoln and wife with other friends, this evening visited Ford's Theatre, for the purpose of witnessing the performance of the American Cousin it was announced in the papers that Gen. Grant would also be present, but that gentleman took a late train for New Jersey. The theatre was densely crowded, and everybody seemed delighted with the scene before them. During the third act, and while there was a temporary pause for one of the actors to enter, a sharp report of a pistol, which merely attracted attention, but suggested nothing serious, until a man rushed to the front of the President's box waving a long dagger in his right hand, exclaiming, 'Sic semper tyrannis,' and immediately leaped from the box, which was in the second tier, to the stage beneath, and ran across to the opposite side of the stage, making his escape, amid the bewilderment of the audience, from the rear of the theatre, and, mounting a horse, fled. A scream from Mrs. Lincoln first disclosed the fact to the audience that the President had been shot, when all present rose to their feet, rushing toward the stage, many exclaiming, hang him! The excitement was of the wildest possible description. The theatrical performance was of course brought to an abrupt close. There was a rush toward the President's box, when cries were heard to stand back and give him air; has anyone any stimulants?

"On a hasty examination it was found that the President had been shot through the head above and back of the temporal bone, and that some of the brain was oozing out. He was removed to a private house opposite the theatre. The Surgeon General of the army and other surgeons were sent for to attend to his condition.

"On examination of the private box, blood was discovered on the back of the cushioned rocking chair in which the President had been sitting, also on the partition and floor. A common single barreled pocket pistol was found on the carpet. A military guard was placed in front of the private residence to which the president had been conveyed. There was an immense crowd waiting, all deeply anxious to learn the condition of the president. It had been previously announced that the wound was fatal, but all hoped otherwise. The shock to the community was terrible. Members of the cabinet, Messrs. Sumner, Farnsworth, Judge Bates, Gov. Oglesby, Gen. Meigs, Col. Hay and a few personal friends, with Surgeon Gen. Barnes with his immediate assistants were around the bedside.

"The President was in a state of syncope, totally insensible and breathing slowly, blood oozed from the wound at the back of his head. The Surgeon General exhausted every possible effort of medical skill, but all hope was gone. The parting of his family with the dying President was too sad for description. The President and Mrs. Lincoln didn't start for the theatre until 15 minutes after nine o'clock. Speaker Colfax was at the White House at the time. The President stated to him that he was going, although Mrs. Lincoln had not been well. Because papers had announced that Gen. Grant had announced that he was to be present, and as Grant had gone north, he did not wish the audience to be disappointed, he went with apparent reluctance, and urged Colfax to go with him, but that gentlemgn had made other engagements and with Mr. Ashman, of Mass., bid him good bye.

"When the excitement at the theatre was at its wildest height, reports were circulated that Sec. Seward had also been assassinated. On reaching this gentlemen's residence a crowd and military guard were round its door. On entering it was ascertained that the reports were based on the truth. Everybody there was so excited that scarcely an intelligible word could be gathered. The facts are substantially as follows: About to o'clock a man rang the bell. The call having been answered by a colored servant, he said he had come from Dr. Viede, Sec. Seward's physician, with a prescription, at the same time holding in his hand a small piece of folded paper, and saying in answer to a refusal, that he must see the secretary, as he was intrusted with particular directions. He insisted on going up although repeatedly informed that no one could enter the chamber. He pushed the servant one side and walked heavily toward the Secretary's room, and was met there by Mr. Frederick Seward.

"He demanded to see the Secretary, making some false representations to the servant. What further passed in the way of colloquy is not known, but a man struck him on the head with a billy, severely injuring the skull felling him almost senseless. The assassin then rushed into the chamber and attacked Mr. Seward, paymaster A. S. A., and Mr. Hansell, a messenger of state department and two male nurses disabling them. He then rushed upon the Secretary, who was lying in bed in the same room and inflicted three stabs in the neck, bu. severing, it is thought and hoped no artery, though he bled profusely. The assassin then rushed down stairs, mounted his horse quickly and rode off before an alarm could be sounded, or in the same manner as the assasination of the President, it is believed the injuries of the Secretary are not fatal nor those of the others, Secretary and Ass't Secretary are very severe. Sec. Stanton, Wells and other prominent officials of the government called at Seward's house to inquire into his condition and there heard of the assassination of the President. They then proceeded to the house where he was lying. An immense crowd was gathered in front of the private house, and a strong guard also stationed there. Many persons naturally supposing he would be brought to his home. The city presents a scene of wild excitement, accompanied by frequent expressions of indignation and profound sorrow. Many shed tears.

The military authorities have dispatched mounted patrols in every direction in order if possible to arrest the assassins. The whole police are likewise engaged for the same purpose. The attacks both at the theatre and Seward's house, took place at about the same hour—10 o'clock—thus showing a preconcerted plan to assassinate those gentlemen. Some evidence of the guilt of the party who attacked the President is in possession of the Board of Police. The Vice President is in the city his headquarters guarded by troops."

CARTER HARRISON has again been elected mayor of Chicago, polling nearly as many votes as the combined opposition. He has made a good wholesome record in protecting Chicago's property against encroachments of street railway greed. It was unfortunate that Mr. Altgeldt was in the race, but robbed of the votes Altgeldt polled, his victory is the more conspicuous. Mr. Harrison is a devotee of the Chicago platform and all the talk about his "straddle" proposition is the rankest kind of buncombe.
