complications. He had been unconscious since Saturday morning and death came painlessly. Ever since Justice Field's retirement from the supreme bench in December, 1897, he had enjoyed com-paratively good health, and being relieved from the responsibilities which he had borne for so many years, he became more cheerful than formerly, and seemed to enjoy the society of his friends and acquaintances more than ever before. About two weeks ago he took a longer ride than usual in an open carriage and contracted a severe cold, which rapidly developed the kidney trouble from which he had suffered, though but slightly, for some time. The disease readily yielded to treatment, and on Thursday last he sat up for a time and seemed quite himself again, but on Saturday morning a ohange for the worse took place, and noon he lost consciousness. From that time he sank rapidly, and Simultaneously the gunboats hover-ing along the shore shelled the woods ahead of the troops, and drove the Fili-pinos inland. The gatlings cleared everal trenches.

The trenches that were not cleared by the gunboats gave considerable resistance when the line was nearing the city, and the Laguna de Bay and Ocete bombarded for an hour in the hope of making them too warm for occupancy, but did not succeed in clearing them entirely. General Lawton, with the Fourteenth infantry battalions, approached a narrow iron bridge across a creek on the south border of the town. Here a company of Filipinos was intrenched across the stream and behind a stone barricade at the entrance to the bridge. The Americans rushed forward in single file in the face of a galling fire, demolishing the barricade with their hands, and drove the enemy from the trenches, killing a dozen.
